Roosevelt, Morgenthau for U. S. Ownership of Reserve Stocks.

Treasury Chief Tilts With Glass

Administration Also Approves Control of Open Market Operations.

By Franklyn Waltman, Jr.

Indications that the pending Eccles banking bill is more conservative than the views of high Administration figures were given yesterday when both President Roosevelt and Secretary of the Treasury Henry Morgenthau, jr., applauded the idea of a Government-owned central bank.

Morgenthau, appearing before the Glass Banking and Currency subcommittee, said he belonged to a school which believed the Government should own the stock of the Federal Reserve banks. He held that it was fundamental that the Government should control the instruments of credit.

President Roosevelt, commenting on the Morgenthau statement at his press conference, asserted that Government ownership of the Federal Reserve banks would solve a great many problems.

In Private Hands.

Although the Eccles bill centralizes control over the reserve banks, discount rates, open market operations and deposit reserve requirements in the Federal Reserve Board, named by the President, it leaves ownership of the 12 reserve banks in the member banks of the system—that is, in private hands.

Morgenthau did not suggest that the bill, already passed by the House, be amended to provide for Government purchase of the stock of the reserve banks. Nevertheless his commendation of a Government-owned central bank, followed almost immediately by that of the President, had a significance that was more than academic.

There is some militant sentiment on Capitol Hill for outright Government ownership of the reserve banks—the only step necessary in conjunction with the other provisions of the Eccles bill to make the system a straight out Government bank—and the Roosevelt-Morgenthau commendation of this idea yesterday may strengthen those in Congress holding similar views.

Thomas Bill Pending.

Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, chief advocate of inflation in Congress, has a bill pending for the purchase of the Reserve banks and he is determined to attach his measure to the bank bill when the latter reaches the Senate floor.

A similar proposal was presented to the House, but was rejected by a vote of 112 to 61, but that was before either the President or Mr. Morgenthau had made known his views on the subject. Indeed, yesterday marked the first time that Mr. Morgenthau has publicly expressed his preference for a Government-owned system, although it was known that such ideas were entertained seriously in the Treasury last summer.

Child, 4, Killed By Auto in D.C.

Jane Fowler's Death Raises Toll to 43 for Year; Girl Was Driving.

A 4-year-old girl was struck and killed by an auto driven by a 17-year-old high school girl late yesterday. The victim of the crash was Jane E. Fowler, of 3523 Holmead place northwest. Her death marked the forty-third traffic fatality in the District in 1935.

The child was playing on Holmead place northwest between Monroe street and Spring road when the accident occurred. The driver of the auto was Marian S. Voshall, 17, of the 3400 block of Quebec street, according to police. Miss Voshall was released in the custody of her father, Roy D. Voshall, pending a coroner's inquest.

The injured child was taken to Garfield Hospital. She died a few minutes later of a fractured skull.

Robert Quinn, 9 years old, received undetermined injuries yesterday in a collision between his scooter and an auto at Forty-first and Garrison streets northwest. He was treated at Georgetown Hospital for shock, bruises, and possible internal injuries.

The auto involved in the crash was driven by Bernard M. Wise, a lawyer of the 1600 block of Forty-fourth street northwest. He was not held. The child lives at 4931 Massachusetts avenue northwest.

4 Nazi Plotters Lose Appeal; Execution Is Due in 24 Hours

Firing Squad to Be Faced Quickly by Memel Territory Conspirators Unless Lithuanian President Grants Clemency.

By the Associated Press.

Kaunas, Lithuania, May 17.—Only the possibility of presidential clemency stood tonight between four Nazis accused of plotting to return the Memel territory to Germany and death before a firing squad.

The Lithuanian Supreme Court upheld today the sentences of death and of imprisonment to 87 other German residents of Memel sentences which created flaming resentment in Germany.

Although the doomed men indicated they did not wish an appeal, their attorneys made hasty preparations to carry the matter to President Antanas Smetona who has the power to save the men from death. Otherwise they are to go before a firing squad within 24 hours.

The condemned men are Emil Boll, Walter Preiss, Heinrich Wannagat and Emil Lepa. They were convicted of killing an alleged fellow conspirator, George Jessutis, who is said to have confessed to Lithuanian authorities that he had negotiated in Berlin with Nazi officials. His body was thrown into the River Jura.

The defendants were convicted in March, although 35 other Nazis were acquitted. One man was given a life term and the other prison sentences ranged from one to 12 years. Property of most of the Nazis was confiscated.

The supreme court reached the decison on the men's appeal after deliberating four days and it automatically put into effect the sentences of a military tribunal.

Shortly after the Kaunas sentences were announced demonstrators in Berlin marched on the Lithuanian Legation, where they were turned back by police. There were bitter outbreaks against Lithuania throughout the country, followed in turn by anti-German feeling in Lithuania.

Memel, formerly German territory, was given up by the Reich in the Versailles Treaty and for three years was occupied by the Allies. Lithuanians seized the port in 1923 in a surprise attack. Administration of Memel was then turned over to Lithuania although it retained a measure of autonomy.

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, May 17.—The decision of the Lithuanian Supreme Court upholding death sentences against four Memel Germans was called by Nazi officials here tonight a hidden Bolshevist stab at Germany, "perhaps even with the intention of provoking Germany into aggressive action."

The approval of the death sentences came as a blow to Berlin, but the foreign office said a protest was unlikely. Hopes were expressed Great Britain would take action

Body of Boy, 7, Found in Creek By Searchers

Son of Swimming Coach at Naval Academy Drowned Near His Home.

By Laurance F. Stuntz.

A Staff Correspondent.

Annapolis, Md., May 17.—The widespread search for missing 7-year-old Frank Sazana ended today when the body of the sinewy son of the swimming instructor at the Naval Academy was found in the muddy bottom of Weems Creek less than 150 yards from his home.

The boy apparently fell into the creek from a rowboat the day he disappeared—and drowned.

Despite the fact his father teaches swimming, the child never had learned to swim. An illness last year temporarily prevented his receiving instructions from his father.

"That's my boy," said Mr. Sazana stoically today, after he had elbowed his way through a small crowd around the body.

Then he turned sadly away.

The child disappeared Wednesday afternoon, shortly after he was seen walking toward the creek, which today yielded his body. A rowboat was found floating several hundred yards from the bridge yesterday, and men from the Naval Academy began to drag the bed of the creek.

After a general alarm had been sounded, search for the swimming instructor's son began, with Navy planes joining in the hunt. More than 200 midshipmen combed the countryside, aided by the West Annapolis Fire Company, and volunteer workers. Seaplanes from the academy zoomed and droned over the area in which he disappeared.

Two State policemen from Baltimore came here this morning on the orders of Gov. Harry W. Nice, and began at once to check persons living on the roads out of town to

Nun Gets 5-Year Prison Term, Fined $57,000 by Nazi Court

By the Associated Press.

Berlin, May 17.—Nazi justice moved swiftly and sternly today by sentencing the first of more than 50 nuns on trial for violation of Germany's rigid foreign exchange restrictions to five years' imprisonment.

In addition the defendant, Sister Wernera, secretary of the Vincentine Order of Roman Catholic nuns at Cologne, was ordered to pay a fine of 140,000 marks about $57,000 or spend an additional 14 months in a cell. She will lose rights of citizenship during her imprisonment.

Catholic Germany was deeply stirred by the case, if the Government brings the other nuns to trial, Catholic circles said they expect the Vatican to declare the concordat between the German government and the Holy See abrogated.

Sister Wernera had admitted smuggling 252,000 marks from the country and an equal amount, Judge Herman Jordan ruled, must be collected from the Vincentine Order to reimburse the Government.

The smuggled funds allegedly were taken to the order's branch in Belgium, then to the Netherlands, where they were changed into florins. The State Attorney charged two-thirds was invested, while one-third was used to amortize a loan secured at St. Louis, Mo.

D. C. Facing 1-Ct. Increase In Gas Levy

Tax Would Cost Drivers $1,000,000 Yearly; Bill to Be Drafted.

Commissioners Approve Law to Impound Cars Illegally Parked.

An increase of a cent a gallon in the District gasoline tax is to be provided for in a bill ordered drafted by the District Commissioners yesterday.

Impounding of automobiles which are parked so they impede traffic also was voted by the commissioners. The impounding program is to be incorporated in the District traffic regulations and will become effective as soon as the required ten days' public advertisement has been given.

The proposed 1 cent increase per gallon in the gasoline tax would jump that local tax from 2 to 3 cents. The increase, it is estimated would cost gasoline consumers in the National Capital something like another $1,000,000 a year. The present tax produces $2,300,000 a year.

Revision of the present taxation of automobiles in the District has been the subject of a long and complicated battle which has been fought over several years. Members of both the Maryland and Virginia congressional delegations have sought to have the local tax increased. In Maryland the State tax is 4 cents. In Virginia it is 5 cents a gallon. Nearby gasoline sellers have protested the lower tax in the District has hurt their business.

Specific Instances Cited.

The Commissioners modified somewhat the impounding amendment before they gave it formal approval and ordered it promulgated.

Not all illegally parked automobiles are to be impounded. Police would be authorized to remove automobiles parked between loading platforms and safety zones and the curb, cars parked so they obstruct an alley entrance, or the entrances to roadways and garages; where parking is prohibited at any time, or on those specially named streets on which parking is prohibited during rush hours.

The Police Department has two towing machines which will be used to take away cars. They will be taken to police station houses and there held until the owner appears and posts from $3 to $5 collateral.

Impounding improperly parked automobiles was recommended by a special traffic committee headed by George W. Offutt, chairman of the Alcoholic Beverage Control Board. Other members of the committee are H. Winship Wheatley, head of the District Bar Association; James G. Yaden, president of the Federation of Citizens Associations; Richmond B. Keech, member of the Public Utilities Commission; Wallace B. Robinson, representing the Board of Trade; Fred Dent, District surveyor, and George Beasley, president of the Federation of Civic Associations.

Proposals Not Yet Public.

Several other aspects of traffic regulation are dealt with in the report the committee is expected to submit to the Commissioners next Monday or Tuesday. Mr. Offutt said none of the proposals would be made public prior to the time they are submitted to the Commissioners.

A statement issued by the Commissioners follows:

"The sole purpose of the impounding law, which has been materially limited in scope, is to protect life and property and to permit even flow of traffic on arterial highways.

"It is essential that with the simultaneous inward and outward flow of traffic, streets be free for this purpose.

"This regulation is not intended in any wise to deal with minor

NRA's Chief Acts to Quit Before July

Richberg Would Leave Public Service and Practice Law.

Leader of New Dealists Expects to Stay for Congress Battle.

By Felix Bruner.

Donald R. Richberg, chairman of the National Industrial Recovery Board and outstanding New Deal leader, said yesterday that he hoped to be able to sever all connection with the Government and return to private practice of law by July 1.

At the same time he indicated that he expected to follow through his fight for a two-year extension of NRA until a conclusion is reached.

"I don't want to leave the child in a dying condition," he said.

Meanwhile, lines were being drawn in Congress for a major battle over the extension program. Some members of both houses predicted that it would be impossible, because of apparent differences between the House and the Senate, to complete extension legislation by June 16, the date of the expiration of the present law.

Court Case Complicating.

Seriously affecting the situation is the pending Supreme Court decision on the Schechter case on the constitutionality of the recovery act. The decision, which may be handed down Monday, could change the whole aspect of the problem and make necessary an entirely new legislative approach. In any event, the decision is expected by June 3, when the court adjourns. In recent years the court has not allowed any major business to be carried over a summer adjournment.

Chairman Doughton of the House Ways and Means Committee, which will draft the House bill, intimated that the question of the form of the proposed legislation may be carried directly to President Roosevelt.

"If the President wants to talk to us about the bill, we shall go down and see him," he said.

The committee, following conferences Thursday with NRA officials, was taking a breathing spell preparatory to starting its hearings Monday. Richberg said he presumed he would go before the committee as the hearings opened, but that no definite arrangement had been made.

The committee was considered almost certain to report out a measure along the lines recommended by Richberg and approved by the President, although there is reported to be a difference of opinion over the Interstate Commerce provision.

Richberg Ignores Speech.

Richberg yesterday refused to comment on the speech of Senator Clark (Democrat), of Missouri, criticizing his alleged "lobbying" activities, or to discuss the pending legislation.

"It seems to be a dangerous subject on which even to express an opinion," he said.

Explaining his impending departure from Government service, Richberk said that it was understood when he was named head of NRA that he was to serve only during the "transition period," made necessary by expiration of the law.

"I feel the need of a real rest," he said. "I want to get away by July 1, but I don't want my departure to interfere with leaving the work in proper shape for my successor."

Richberg said he wanted to disabuse people's minds of the idea that he had any selfish motive in fighting for NRA extension.

"This has been a very costly job," he said. "I prophesied that whoever followed the first administration of NRA would have a very unpleasant time. My prophecy has been fulfilled."

Asked what he intended to do first after leaving the service, he

Roosevelt Will Deliver Bonus Veto Ultimatum To Congress in Person

Action Is Expected on Monday Before Joint Session at Capitol.

Doom of Measure Is Seen Assured

Patman Bill's Backers Have Faint Hope for Victory Now.

By Robert C. Albright.

In a dramatic decision that shattered precedent and sent bonus hopes aglimmering, President Roosevelt determined yesterday not only to veto the Patman bill, but to deliver that ultimatum to Congress personally.

The announcement slipped out at a White House press conference, and laid once and for all widely circulated reports that the President would veto the bonus with his tongue in his cheek, not expecting the Senate to sustain him.

The decision came shortly after Vice President Garner attached his signature to the "greenback" bill, to the accompaniment of camera clickings and the scratching of four different pens. A few hours later, after routine enrolling processes, the bill was dispatched to the White House.

Veto Expected Monday.

Both houses of Congress may assemble to hear the President express himself, not only on cash payment of the bonus, but against the inflationary implications of the Patman bill. The veto is expected on Monday. Never in history before has a President personally delivered a veto message to Congress.

"I hope with all my heart that the veto will be sustained," President Roosevelt told reporters.

Senate leaders expressed confidence the President will get his veto, even the measure's sponsors admitted the Patman plan admitted ruefully they have picked up only three votes, insufficient to override a veto.

Both sides have conceded the final outcome, in what promised to be a very close vote, depended on the nature of the President's veto message—whether it was couched in soft or emphatic language.

Doubts Dispelled.

If there was any doubt about this, the President dispelled it yesterday.

In as forceful a statement as veteran correspondents recall ever being issued from the White House, Mr. Roosevelt told press men:

No. 1. That he most certainly is going to veto the bill.

No. 2. That he will use the strongest, most emphatic language at his command.

No. 3. That it was his sincere hope that Congress will sustain him.

Disclosure that the President will deliver his veto message personally came unexpectedly at the close of the conference, as questions and interest were beginning to lag.

A diminutive reporter on the front row popped an innocent question.

Hours, Wages Stir New Fight On Work Plan

Allotments Held Up Pending Settlement; McCarran Set to Attack.

While President Roosevelt was preparing yesterday to sign allotments totaling more than $1,000,000,000 to start the new works program, a controversy over wages to be paid workers was brewing.

Until the question of wages and working conditions can be settled, nothing can be done toward accomplishing the first purpose of the program, that of putting men to work.

Harry L. Hopkins, head of the Works Progress Division, has been intrusted with the task of making recommendations concerning wages and hours. He has repeatedly indicated that his report was about ready, but for some reason it has been repeatedly delayed.

The storm over the wage question was expected to break out anew in Congress, where it was fought over before enactment of the works bill. One report is that wages are to be 30 per cent below those prevailing in communities in which work is done. Senator McCarran (Democrat), Nevada, said yesterday that he was preparing to address the Senate in opposition to this plan.

None of the huge allotments made by the allotment board is effective until it is approved by the President, who yesterday intimated that he might not approve all of them. Presidential action on most of them is expected early next week.

Meanwhile, without waiting for rules and regulations, Dr. Rexford G. Tugwell, Undersecretary of Agriculture and head of the rural resettlement division, was said to be acquiring land in which to place needy rural families. No details of the location of the projects were revealed.

In Kansas City, according to the Associated Press, M. L. Wilson, Assistant Secretary of Agriculture, announced that the Government

Senate Group Votes Support Of Social Bill

Redrafted Measure More Liberal Than Legislation Passed in House.

The Administration's many-headed social security program, revised to include a voluntary retirement system and benefits for the blind, yesterday was approved by the Senate Finance Committee without a record vote.

Chairman Pat Harrison will report the bill to the Senate and leaders expect to call it up within the week. The House already has acted, but the redrafted Senate bill goes far beyond the scope of the House measure, adding two new titles.

As rewritten by the Senate Finance Committee, experts said the legislation conforms more closely to the views of the President's committee on economic security and with unemployment stabilization objectives of the President.

A futile effort was made to strike out old-age pension features by Senator Daniel O. Hastings (Republican), of Delaware. His motion was defeated 12 to 6. The committee also refused to exempt industrial retirement systems from the scope of the Federal plan.

Provisions for a voluntary annuity system was dramatically restored to the bill, following a personal appeal by Representative David J. Lewis (Democrat), of Maryland, who, with Senator Robert F. Wagner (Democrat), of New York, originally drafted the measure.

Restoration was by a 7 to 5 vote, with Chairman Harrison voting "present." This title, stricken from the original bill by the House, would permit sale of voluntary annuity policies by the Federal Government, paying as high as $100 a month. No policies would be sold for less than $60 a year.

Other changes written into the vast omnibus bill by the committee provide:

1. Another new title, appropri-

Student Fist Fight Ends Radical Talk

Booing of Hathaway Results in Free-for-All.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., May 17.—A fist fight between University of Virginia students brought an abrupt end to a speech here in Cabell Hall tonight by Clarence Hathaway, editor of the Daily Worker, official organ of the Communist Party.

The riot broke out after organized booing by a section of the student party interfering with Hathaway's talk. The appearance of tthe speaker here was sponsored by the university chapter of the National Students League. Several received minor injuries in the brief hand-to-hand battle.

Modern Microphone Messiahs Make Debut in Post Tomorrow

Preachers of Political Promise to Be Presented Under Aegis of 'The Unofficial Observer,' Author of the Book, 'The New Dealers.'

Tomorrow The Washington Post begins publishing a series of articles in which, to the drumming of picturesque words and the lilting piping of pungent phrases, Washingtonians may meet the most colorful public personalities of the day.

Sixteen preachers of political promise will be introduced. They will be presented by a man long a wanderer amid the Washington scene. He calls himself "the unofficial observer."

He wrote, last year, a book called "The New Dealers," first published in serial form in The Post, later a best seller as soon as it was compacted into book form.

And in a chronicle of the times he sets his scene with the following introduction:

"As the New Deal coalition of conservative Democrats, Progressive Republicans, liberals, independents and political yes-men coasted into its third year of national power, there was a massing of Messiahs and a rupture of microphones without precedent in our political history. For a time it looked as though the New Deal had been stalled between the stubborn diggers-in-of-heels and the impatient tearers-out-of-hairs.

"Now, it so happens that I have been in constant if skeptical contact with most of the American Messiahs since long before the advent of Roosevelt and the New

Attempt to Slay Lawrence Seen in Motorcycle Accident

By the Associated Press.

Wool, Dorsetshire, Eng., May 17.—Extraordinary measures for official secrecy surrounding Col. T. E. Lawrence, lying near death in an army hospital, led to reports tonight that the motorcycle accident in which he was injured resulted from an attempt on his life.

The world-famous Lawrence of Arabia remained in critical condition and unconscious for the fourth day since the motorcycle he was riding collided on a public road with a bicycle ridden by a child. Physicians announced there was faint hope for recovery.

It was understood that a guard had been placed recently near the cottage to which Lawrence had retired and it was rumored he had asked for police protection.

Officials asserted, however, the guard was posted there merely to watch the cottage in case of a possible approach of a hearth fire burning some distance away.

One rumor, generally discounted, was that Lawrence, an expert rider, was ambushed and shot and lost control of his motorcycle just as two youthful bicyclists approached.

It was known that both cyclists involved in the accident were warned officially not to comment on the incident.

Physicians resorted to artificial feeding in an attempt to maintain Lawrence's slowly ebbing strength.

Congress Gets Revised Plans On Rail Pension

A new railway pension act made its appearance yesterday, designed to avoid the constitutional pitfalls which resulted in the invalidation of last year's act by the Supreme Court.

By a restatement of the bill's purposes, new definitions for some of its terms eliminating all retroactive provisions, the measure's authors said they were confident it had been brought into conformity with the court's five-four decision.

They were Representative Crosser (Democrat), Ohio, a member of the House Interstate Commerce Committee, and Senator Wagner (Democrat), New York, whose names also were attached to the 1934 act. Crosser introduced the new bill in the House, while Wagner pocketed a copy and awaited the expiration of the Senate's week-end recess.

Last year's bill was declared unconstitutional by a majority of the court on the ground that employer contributions to the pension system were a denial of the constitutional guarantee that no one should be deprived of property without "due process of law."

The majority held, too, and repeatedly emphasized that the measure's purposes were social and not regulative—that there was a sharp distinction between social desirability and constitutional authority—the authority of Congress to regulate interstate commerce.

The bill introduced yesterday stated in its title that it was intended to "promote safe and efficient service * * * by providing a retirement system."

It was recalled, however, that one point made by the court's majority in invalidating the old act was that figures showed a constant annual increase in efficiency and safety and that the retirement of aging employes did not tend to promote either.

Retroactive provisions which the court scored severely were eliminated by a change in the definitions of "employe" and "service period" to make the new bill applicable only to those employed upon or after the date of enactment.

Nevertheless, observers noted that the new bill contained the old requirement for contributions by the railroads for building up a pool from which retirement benefits would be paid. Such contributions the court denounced as a denial of "due process."

They remarked also that no distinction was made between employers actually working in interstate commerce and those engaged in intrastate activities. The Supreme Court majority, without discussing the point, affirmed a lower court decision invalidating the act for that reason.

Georgia Drys Take Lead of 227 Votes

Reports From 22 Counties Are Awaited.

By the Associated Press.

Atlanta, May 17.—A lead of 227 votes for the drys was recorded tonight in the latest recheck of returns from Wednesday's repeal referendum in Georgia.

When the last tabulation was made by the Associated Press 22 counties still had not reported to Secretary fo State John B. Wilson. Unofficial returns from these counties were rechecked.

The legislative act providing for the referendum said the secretary of state was to certify the returns to the Governor within three days. The latter then is to issue a proclamation declaring the official results.

The last tabulation contained the returns from 137 counties. The unofficial reports from the remainder of the 159 counties in Georgia, together with the official returns in this tabulation, showed:

For repeal, 81,893.

Against repeal, 82,120.

Beer and wine, voted on separately in the same referendum, maintained their majorities of more than 8,500.

Between You and Me

Roosevelt Silences Doubters on His Bonus Stand; Secretary Wallace Knows His Bible.

By Raymond Clapper

IF anyone—which is doubtful—seriously thought that President Roosevelt was finessing for a double-cross on the bonus, he should have no such suspicions now.

In words as plain and emphatic as human language could make them, Mr. Roosevelt told newspaper correspondents yesterday that his veto message would be as strong as he could make it. He went further and said that with all of his heart he hoped his veto would be sustained. Then he went still further—further than any President ever has gone before in pressing a veto. He said he would go to Congress in person and read his veto message. A gasp of surprise swept the group. With a sudden, unexpected stroke, Mr. Roosevelt had summoned to his aid the theatrical genius of his political family. Even the most captious critic could ask for no more evidence of sincerity.

For a week the underground gossip in Washington was that, in substance, Mr. Roosevelt had tipped off some of his intimates that he expected to veto the bonus bill and had winked when he said it, as if to say that it would be just dandy if Congress should override him. Those who peddled the story explained that this would enable the President to make himself solid with conservative business interests by a veto, and at the same time avoid wrath of the veterans by letting them have their bonus.

Literally, such talk would seem to cast a slur upon the presidential honor. But is was not so intended. In fact, the story came from sources friendly to Mr. Roosevelt. They encouraged the idea as a clever solution. That such a story could gain currency is rather evidence that Washington is a political capital and that at times its cynicism passes the saturation point. None of those who encouraged this story would have accused Mr. Roosevelt of doing a dishonest thing. It is merely that a clever idea has a hypnotic appeal to a second-rate politician. First-rate politicians know that clever moves are full of traps and boomerangs.

Because Washington has regarded Mr. Roosevelt as a top-star politician, everyone was amazed at the staging of the farm march. It was too clever to be good. Mr. Roosevelt handled his part in the show with rabble-rousing technique. You could have shut your eyes and thought it was Huey Long. It was like George Arliss playing for W. C. Fields.

Mr. Roosevelt is a great political thespian, but he was miscast in the farm show. He is back in character now.

* * * *

Secretary of Agriculture Henry Wallace knows his Bible. He has written books on religion. As a youth he studied them all. His idea of an ever-normal granary he drew from Confucius.

Recently some of Wallace's critics forgot that he was a Bible student. They told him he ought to stop the AAA nonsense and do as Joseph did in ancient Egypt.

Wallace checked up in his Bible and fired back in their teeth his answer: "It is written in the forty-seventh chapter of Genesis, verses 14, 16, 20 and 21, that in the time of need Joseph took away on behalf of Pharaoh, first, all of the farmers' money; second, all their cattle; third, all their land, and then put the farmers on relief rolls in the cities. I decline to treat American farmers the way Joseph treated Egyptian farmers in their time of greatest need."

Advocates of the Passamaquoddy project for harnessing the tides in the Bay of Fundy to produce electric power floored their opponents and marched on their way to an initial $10,000,000 works allotment when they declared, "It isn't nearly as bad as Grand Coulee."

The tide-harnessing scheme has been up for years. PWA turned it down. But when millions of Government money was set aside to build Grand Coulee Dam in the middle of a Western desert, the 'Quoddy boys knew all that they had to do was to keep harping on that. They were right.

* * * *

If Senators opposing Huey Long could make up their minds either to demolish him or to give him complete silent treatment they might make headway in breaking him down.

But they do neither of these things. They continue to peck at him. Consequently, they merely serve to give him fresh openings. They make trifling interruptions which, after the Kingfish comes back, make his interlocutors look like stooges serving up feeder lines by prearrangement.

Senator Bailey of North Carolina, Baptist preacher's son, and a lean, cold-blooded, courageous customer, is the only critic who has put Huey down. He does it by managing to throw into his brief, simple remarks, a cold disdain as if a sardine were being ignored by one who didn't like them.

Long says it has been his good fortune to have been opposed by blind men.

"I have gone as far as I have," he says, "with my limited ability, by the fact that my enemies had less foresight than I had. I have very little foresight, and they have less. But they are worse off than I am, for they do not even have hindsight."

The result is that when Long's critics try to make a monkey out of him, they usually finish vice versa.

When H. G. Wells was in America recently observing our new Messiahs in action, he thought that the ominous thing was what was not said by way of reply to the Longs, Coughlins and Townsends. He was impressed not by what they said but by the weakness of those who would oppose and discredit them.

In following the unfolding of the new works plan, it will be well to remember that while the voice is that of Frank C. Walker, spokesman for the new set-up, the hand is that of Harry Hopkins, the hard-hitting head of FERA and of the late and only slightly lamented CWA.

The real doings are being done by the Hopkins crew. Public announcements emphasize the larger PWA type projects. But the volume will come from smaller but more numerous jobs engineered by Hopkins. The play is to keep Hopkins and his CWA type activities as much under cover as possible for the present.

Most persons have heard the story of why Columbus was the first New Dealer, namely that when he started out he didn't know where he was going, when he landed he didn't know where he was, and when he got back he didn't know where he had been.

But there is still another reason. He did it on borrowed money.

House Banishes Old Nepotism Bugaboo Again

By Leon Dure, Jr.

House members demonstrated yesterday that they want to continue the ancient practice of hiring relatives for clerks when they rejected, by a 82-to-18 vote, an attempt to banish nepotism from Capitol Hill.

In sweeping the $20,355,965 legislative appropriation bill to passage, the lower chamber also vehemently shouted down a proposal to abolish a $175,000 item tucked into the measure for members' mileage.

After four days of rambling debate, the 44-page bill was approved by a voice vote in exactly 43 minutes. This is the measure that provides funds for the operation of Congress and the Government Printing Office.

It's An Old Fight.

Representative John R. Mitchell (Democrat), of Tennessee, staged his annual one-man revolt against nepotism when the bill was up for amendments.

He also proposed the elimination of mileage—a system under which members are paid 15 cents per mile to and for the Capital. The bill that passed the House raises this amount to 20 cents per mile, an increase of $43,750.

In both instances, Mitchell argued that members receive a large enough salary to enable them to set an example of economy for the rest of the Government.

Representative Randolph Carpenter (Democrat), of Kansas, volunteered that he had come to Washington by automobile, had deducted his actual expenses from his mileage allowance, and had returned the balance to the Treasury.

One Votes All Alone.

No other member offered such testimony, and cries of "vote, vote," cut short any further debate. When the "ayes" were called, Mitchell's was the only one audible.

The "noes" shook the building.

The allowance for clerk hire in the new bill is $2,200,000. Each member is given $5,000 to spend as he sees fit, the only proviso being that no secretary receive more than $3,900.

Mitchell's amendment sought to prohibit the use of this fund for relatives closer than the third degree. He said that the practice of hiring relatives has been prevalent for years, but conceded that it has lessened in recent times.

Again the "noes" vibrated the windows. Mitchell called for a division, which showed only 18 favoring the amendment and 82 opposed.

The House also rejected, by a 66-29 vote, an attempt by Representative John Taber (Republican), of New York, to strike out a $10,000 item for a legislative reference digest, to be prepared by the librarian.

More Spending Sustained.

The only successful amendment was a proposal by Representative John F. Dockweiler (Democrat), of California, upping maintenance of the House Office Building $1,200 to provide metal shelving.

As finally approved by the House, the bill represents an increase of approximately $1,888,000 over the appropriation last year. Restoration of salaries accounted for $1,380,000 of the increase, and the "loaning" of $1,000,000 to the Public Printer took that much more. Hence, the Appropriations Committee reported that, exclusive of salary raises, the measure was an actual decrease of $495,000 from last year.

Undismayed by the vote, Mitchell declared he will press his pending anti-nepotism bill at a hearing next week before the Committee on Accounts. He added that he will insist the hearing be open.

Witness Backs Mellon's Claim On Stock Value

McClintic-Marshall Assets Worth 13 Millions in 1913, Hossack Says.

Assets of the McClintic-Marshall Construction Co. were worth between $13,000,000 and $15,000,000 in 1913, A. B. Hossack, vice president of the American Appraisal Co., New York, testified yesterday at the Mellon income tax hearing.

The witness, before a special board of tax appeals, by implication substantiated a valuation of $500 a share which Andrew W. Mellon, former Secretary of the Treasury, placed on his McClintic-Marshall holdings in the face of a Government claim of $158 a share.

"In fixing the valuation," Hossack said, "I gave considerable weight to the fact that this company, starting at practically nothing, showed such remarkable growth. It was an outstanding company."

Heavy Loans Defended.

Under cross-examination by Frederick Shearer, Internal Revenue Bureau counsel, the witness argued heavy loans obtained by the firm, which reached $3,000,000 in one year, were not a reflection on its management.

"It is very unusual for a concern its size to be able to borrow that much money," he declared.

Hossack emphasized that the firm earned $1,000,000 in 1908 and that its volume of business showed a steady increase from 1900 to 1913.

Girdler Sticks to Estimate.

Earlier Tom M. Girdler, president of Republic Steel Corporation, refused to retreat from his testimony of Thursday in which he said the McClintic-Marshall firm was worth between $14,000,000 and $16,000,000 in 1913.

Frank M. Hogan, chief of counsel for Mellon, predicted two weeks would be required for examination of remaining witnesses. The hearings, transferred to Washington from Pittsburgh last week, have already been in progress more than three months.

When the testimony is finished, lawyers will have until October to file briefs. A decision by the board probably will be delayed until after Christmas. Both sides then will have the right of appeal to the Circuit Court of Appeals and the Supreme Court.

Johnson Choice Of Roosevelt As China Envoy

President Makes Selection Contingent Upon Congress' Approval.

President Roosevelt yesterday announced that if Congress approves by appropriating the necessary funds, the elevation of the American Legation in China to an embassy, he would name Nelson T. Johnson as this country's first ambassador to the Chinese.

Earlier in the day, simultaneous with similar announcements from the British, French and Japanese, the State Department asserted that the President had approved steps to elevate the American Legation at Pieping to an embassy. The Chinese have decided to elevate their legation here to an embassy and Dr. Soa-Ke Alfred Sze, the present Chinese Minister, is expected to be named as his country's ambassador.

Prior to yesterday's announcements, the only countries represented in China by ambassador were Soviet Russia and Italy. The Soviets dispatched an ambassador to China when relations were resumed in 1924. The Italians acted last year. Thus the envoys of those two countries took precedence over the diplomatic representatives of the other powers.

The Japanese for some time have wished to elevate their legation in China to an embassy and finally notified this government several days ago of their intention under an agreement that before any of the great powers acted in that respect it would give advance notice to other nations.

Mr. Johnson is regarded as one of the best versed Americans on Chinese affairs. Born here, he has spent much of his life there in this country's foreign service. In addition he has served as chief of the Division of Far Eastern Affairs of the State Department and as an Assistant Secretary of State. It means an increase in salary from $12,000 to $17,500 annually for him.

Paris, May 17 (U.P.).—Louis Germain-Martin, minister of finance, tonight denied rumors the government was considering inflation because of budget difficulties and because French foreign trade was shrinking steadily.

Accused Wife Slayer To Face Third Trial

San Jose, Calif., May 17 (AP).—The State, twice thwarted in its attempt to hang David A. Lamson as a wife murderer, decided today to bring him to trial for a third time.

The former Stanford University publishing house official accepted the prosecution's decision complacently and predicted he would be acquitted.

Setting of the date for the trial was postponed to next Friday at a brief court session.

McSwain and War Department In New Duel on Army Personnel

Chairman Urges R.O.T.C. Be Used to End West Point Dominance.

By the Associated Press.

Chairman McSwain (Democrat), of South Carolina, of the House Military Committee, and the War Department yesterday stepped up for another duel of pen and words—this time over whether West Point or the Reserve Officers Training Corps would supply additional officer personnel.

The War Department asked of Congress, with President Roosevelt's approval, an increase of from two to three West Point cadets for each Senator and Representative.

McSwain, a World War volunteer officer, wants new officer personnel to come from the collegiate reserves so that West Point graduates won't have all the say in Army affairs.

Circularizes His Views.

In a one-man campaign to get Congress to back him, McSwain today sent circular letters to all House members urging them to vote for his amendment which would authorize President Roosevelt to pick out 1,200 R. O. T. C. graduates annually for a year's service with the Army, 75 of whom would be selected for regular commissions.

The members received the letters, along with a list of about 100 universities where 7,000 R. O. T. C. graduates are produced annually, simultaneously with the filing of the Military Committee's report on the West Point bill by McSwain.

The West Point measure, passed by the Senate in the way the Army wants it, would permit the cadet corps to be increased from 1,200 to around 1,600 at an added cost of about $500,000.

MacArthur Lauds West Point.

Urging the Senate bill, Gen. Douglas MacArthur, chief of staff, said:

"As a military standard this (West Point) institution is the envy of the general staffs of the armies of the world. * * *

"Along military lines, its graduates have been a dominating and controlling factor."

But McSwain said graduates from other colleges would bring a new viewpoint to the Army and urged the Congressmen that, "through the adoption of this amendment, the opportunity will be afforded for many of the younger R. O. T. C. graduates to receive a year's training in the Army with the possible final reward of a commission in the regular army."

McSwain said he wished to "enlist" the co-operation of his colleagues "in urging" passage of the measure with his amendment.

Oklahoma City, May 17 (AP).—The life imprisonment sentence of Virgil Brown, 47, convicted of murdering his secret bride, Marie Elmsley, member of a prominent Windsor, Ontario, family, was affirmed by the Oklahoma Court of Appeals.

Chain Letter to Zoo Demands Elephant

By the United Press.

Detroit, May 17.—John T. Millen, curator of the Detroit zoo, snorted today as he looked up from the chain letter a tired-looking mailman had tossed on his desk.

The letter, mailed from Seattle, asked Millen to send an elephant to the top name of the six listed. The name happened to be that of the curator of the New York zoo.

"This chain was started to bring a real live elephant to you. It can not fail to bring you 15,625 elephants. Of course, you have to provide the peanuts," the letter read.

Other five names were of curators of St. Louis, Chicago, Boston, Los Angeles and Seattle zoos, and there was but one restriction in the letter, "It can not be a white elephant."

Court Dismisses Action of Butler

Servants May Be Panned, Judge Declares.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 17.—A Supreme Court ruling that members of a family are privileged to discuss their servants today lost William Lawrence Graham, discharged butler, his $100,000 slander suit against the socially prominent Margot Flick and her mother, Mrs. Henrietta Flick, of New York and Lenox, Mass.

"How would a household run unless there is freedom of conversation between the members of the family as to the servants?" Justice Philip McCook asked himself as he granted a motion that the suit be dismissed.

Graham charged his reputation as a gentleman's gentleman was damaged, he lost his bride of three months and was driven to drink after Margot telephoned her mother that he had burst into her bedroom while she was clad only in pajamas.

"It's a class war between the rich and the poor," said the dejected butler after the dismissal. "What could I do against five multi-millionaires?"

He said he would appeal.

Toll Mounts in Iran As Quakes Continue

Moscow, May 17 (AP).—Reports from Teheran, capital of Iran (Persia), to the Tass (Soviet) News Agency tonight said earthquakes which have taken a toll of perhaps a thousand lives during two months, were continuing to spread death and destruction throughout much of the country.

In addition to 500 reported killed in the city of Shani and vicinity, hundreds were said to have lost their lives at Mazandaran, on the southern shore of the Caspian Sea.

Avalanches caused by quakes in the villages of Doab and Abbasabad, about 120 miles from Teheran, crushed three workers' barracks, accounting for many victims.

Roosevelt Set To Read Veto On Capitol Hill

do you expect to send up your veto?"

The President inhaled deeply from his cigarette, leaned back in his chair, then slowly withdrew the cigarette and its inseparable holder.

He grinned mysteriously at reporters. He told them he did not think he would send his veto message to the Capitol.

Perplexed reporters stared in some wonderment. The President had just said he was going to veto the message.

After a long pause, Mr. Roosevelt spoke again. He had decided, he said, to take his veto to Congress.

Slowly he put his holder back in his mouth and took another puff.

The timing was perfect, and produced its effect. An almost audible gasp went up, and the room buzzed noisily as correspondents filed out.

No Precedent Found.

Word was flashed to the Capitol. South Trimble, House clerk, thumbed through old records. No, he said, he could not find where any President had ever vetoed an act of Congress and then rubbed it in by a personal appearance.

Observers believed the decision was prompted by persistent reports that some officials close to the President, notably Vice President Garner, thought it would be good politics if the President vetoed the bill and Congress passed it over his veto.

While Garner had carefully refrained from commenting on the report, it had gone undenied and obtained widespread currency. Early in the week Stephen Early, the President's secretary, had taken formal cognizance of it. He reiterated the President would veto the bill and was "not interested in the bonus because of political reasons or political expediency."

Backs Up Secretary.

A previous statement by Early—that the bonus was not discussed during the President's last week-end fishing jaunt with congressional leaders—had drawn cynical chuckles from Washington's press corps. But yesterday the President backed up his secretary. Believe it or not, he told doubting correspondents the bonus was not discussed!

Mr. Roosevelt will complete his veto message today, and tonight will climb aboard the Government yacht Sequoia for a week-end cruise down the river.

Normally, the veto message would go first to the House for action. If the President appears before both Houses assembled, it will be necessary for Congress to adopt a joint resolution authorizing the session.

Knowing the temper of the House, which passed the Patman bill by better than a two-thirds vote, Speaker Byrns expressed doubt that even the appearance of the President would successfully stem an overriding vote in that chamber. In the Senate, however, where the Patman bill's passage fell shy of two-thirds, leaders were confident the President's personal appeal would sustain all predictions that the vote would be upheld.

Patmanites to Meet.

The personally delivered veto will come in the face of thousands of telegrams received by White House, Senators and House members in behalf of the Patman plan, inspired by broadcast appeals by combined veterans' lobbies and the Rev. Charles E. Coughlin, of Detroit. It will run counter to assertions by Gov. Marriner S. Eccles, of the Federal Reserve Board, and Chairman Jesse H. Jones, of the Reconstruction Finance Corporation, that the Patman cash payment would do no harm and might be a good thing.

Senator Elmer Thomas (Democrat), of Oklahoma, bonus-inflationist leader, has called a conference of Patmanites for 10:30 a. m. today to talk over developments. He would make no predictions of victory or defeat.

It was learned, however, that the Patman forces are assured of only 58 votes in the Senate, even on the assumption that none of the 55 who originally voted for the bill switched their votes. This is not enough to override a veto. The three additional votes they count on would be cast by Senator Gerald P. Nye (Republican), of North Dakota; Senator Robert S. Reynolds (Democrat), of North Carolina, and former Representative Dennis Chavez, of New Mexico, who may be sworn in next week to succeed the late Senator Bronson Cutting.

Would Press Compromise.

Should the veto be sustained, the congressional veterans bloc plans to come back again with the Vinson bill, providing a direct $2,200,000,000 appropriation, or a compromise bill, giving the President a choice of methods of payment.

Although there is no precedent for personal delivery of a veto message, it was recalled here the late President Harding appeared before Congress to oppose enactment of the bonus. The President has authority in law to "return" the bill to Congress.

The veto message is expected to contend against a $2,200,000,000 outlay to a restricted class before it is due, stress the inflationary possibilities, and point out that necessary taxes must be enacted to finance any unbudgeted legislation.

Deal. I regard them as indispensable irritants, since they supply the motive-power for essential change and because their manifest exaggerations counterbalance the intemperance of those conservatives who regard Roosevelt as a dangerous revolutionary and the gradual reforms of the New Deal as akin to communism.

"The general public has been confused by their appearance at a critical moment, even if it has been amused and excited by their political tumbling and their economic acrobatics. They have now become the most formidably vociferous element in our public life. They are alive, pugnacious, irresponsible and real—they are democracy with all its drawbacks, America with all its naivete.

"Here they are: the mavericks, the wild men, the reformers, the men with plans and formulas, the fellows who have it in their power—if they can hold their following—to wreck the New Deal, with the very best of intentions. What stands out, in the present crisis in the battle of opinion, is the fact that all of these Messiahs are of the blood and bone of America. They may be doctrinaires, visionaries, mountebacks or plain unvarnished political opportunists but they resolutely hew to the line of thoughts developed by Tom Paine, Tom Jefferson, Andy Jackson, Abe Lincoln and Bill Bryan, and give voice to American dreams rather than European nightmares.

"Hence, despite their inconvenience, it is useless to resent them, for they are part of our very selves. There are plenty of financial Huey Longs in the Wall Street which denounces the Kingfish, plenty of EPIC practitioners in the New England villages which shudder at Upton Sinclair, plenty of broadcasters of commercial creeds which are sisters to Father Coughlin's crusade for social justice under the diaphragm of the microphone. There is, in short, something of each of the Messiahs of 1935 in every adult American whether he acknowledge it or not—for the true revolution which began with the election of F. D. R. is a continuous psychological process, and the only question which confronts us today is whether we are yet ready to accept the incoherent and contradictory implications of our own ideas when they are voiced by the outlandish Messiahs whom we still brand as dangerous."

These articles do not necessarily reflect the editorial opinion of The Post. They are presented because of their interest.

Their publication in The Post, prior to publication in book form by Simon & Schuster, will constitute their first appearance before the reading public of the United States.

Physical Exam Rates Headley, Bean as Fit

Recent examinations of all men on the police force over 55 years of age by the Board of Police Surgeons gave good health ratings to both Inspectors Thaddeus A. Bean and Albert J. Headley, who, it was thought, would be retired by July 1, Superintendent of Police Ernest W. Brown announced yesterday.

Both of these men, who are over 60, were given ratings of "B," which means their health is fair and they are capable of further service. Maj. Brown also received a rating of B. It would have been an A if he had not been overweight, he said.

Of the 103 examined, only two, Lieut. Dennis J. Cullinane and Private Francis A. Waters, received the "C" rating, which will require them to appear before the retirement board and probably be retired. Lieut. Cullinane is at the Twelfth Precinct, while Waters is stationed at the Eleventh.

Chief of Detectives Frank S. W. Burke and Inspector B. A. Lamb, Traffic Bureau head, received ratings of "A," which means their health is excellent.

Baptists Won't Act In Sharecrop Row

By the Associated Press.

Memphis, Tenn., May 17.—The Southern Baptist convention today refused to take immediate action on a plea of a North Carolina preacher and author for an investigation into violence in the east Arkansas sharecropper controversy and its alleged "abrogation of elemental human rights."

It postponed until next year consideration of the recommendation of Dr. E. M. Poteat, jr., of Raleigh, for many years missionary in China and former professor of ethics and philosophy in the University of Shanghai, for establishment of a bureau of social research to gather unbiased information on the sharecropper situation and other labor disputes.

Later in the day the convention adopted the report of the social service commission, expressing unalterable opposition to lynching, motion pictures which depict crime and vice in an alluring manner, opposition to war, and reaffirmed "our unhesitating condemnation and our determined opposition to the beverage liquor traffic in all forms."

High Officials Indorse Plan Of Central Bank

U. S. Ownership of Federal Reserve Stocks Given Approval.

"in principle" Title II of the bill, which lodges absolute control over open-market operations in the Reserve Board.

Under the proposed powers for the Reserve Board it would have authority to determine when and in what amounts the Reserve banks would be required to purchase or sell Government securities. Opponents fear this provision on the ground that it will be utilized to finance Treasury deficits.

"You think that the Government, without one dollar of proprietary interest in the Federal Reserve banks, should be able to force them to lend their money to the Government?" Senator Glass demanded to know.

"I belong to the school of thought which believes the Government should own all the stock of the Federal Reserve banks," Secretary Morgenthau replied.

When Senator Glass suggested that "you are for a central bank owned by the Government," Mr. Morgenthau replied that "I would like to see it if Congress could work out a plan where the Government owned the stock and the trustees could be surrounded with every precaution so they could be free from political or private influence." He denied this would mean a nationalization of all banks.

In discussing the proposal to place the open-market powers in the hands of the Reserve Board, Morgenthau said he thought all instruments regulating the flow of credit should be centered in a Government authority. At present such operations are under control of an open-market committee consisting of 12 members, one named by each bank. This committee, however, can not force Reserve banks to participate in the operations decided on.

For Outside Agency.

When it was suggested that the power should be given directly to the Treasury, Morgenthau asserted: "I wouldn't want that, but I would like to see the power concentrated in an outside agency," independent of the President except for the appointive power.

"Like the Supreme Court?" asked Senator Glass.

"Yes," the Secretary of the Treasury said.

"That would mean removal of members only by impeachment."

"Yes, sir," Morgenthau replied.

The fact that the President can remove any of the members of the Reserve Board before their terms expire, without cause, has been cited as one objection to the pending bill. It is contended such a situation would result in political domination of the banking system.

Morgenthau was summoned before the committee to be questioned about the Treasury's relations with the Reserve System's open market committee. He said they had been most congenial and that he had "no complaint," but he pointed out that except for the first week he was Secretary of the Treasury, the Reserve System had not increased its holdings of Government securities. There has been a turnover in the securities held, but the total has been held constantly at approximately $2,430,000,000, he explained.

Unimportant Role.

Consequently, he added, in the last year and a half the open market committee has played an unimportant role. He said he thought "they could have shown a little more courage and bought long-term securities" in making replacements to their portfolios, explaining that long-term bonds had been replaced by Treasury bills and notes.

Asked if such handling of the Government security portfolio were not "sound business," Secretary Morgenthau said he did not think so, since investors had made money out of the long-term securities, but he conceded that "it is their judgment against mine." He added, however, that he was trustee for 60 Government trust funds holding $1,000,000,000 Government securities and he favored long-term maturities.

Morgenthau said there was nothing for him "to row about" with the open-market committee when he was asked whether he anticipated better relations with the Reserve Board, if it were put in charge of open-market operations. Later he added there was a possibility of conflict under the present arrangement and that it was the purpose of the bill to avoid such conflicts.

Avoids Detail Queries.

The Treasury chieftain backed away from questions as to details in the bill, asserting he had not read it thoroughly but was familiar with a summary of the measure. He said he was not a "trained banker" and had been named by the President as "an administrator." He explained the Treasury had many experts qualified to deal with technical details.

"I think I understand the fundamental philosophy of title II and I favor it in principle," he asserted.

He likewise avoided being questioned regarding inflation and money by asserting that he was "not a monetary theorist." Asked for a definition of inflation he said, "it was kind of tough to go up against two former Secretaries of the Treasury," referring to Senator Glass and Senator William Gibbs McAdoo (Democrat), of California, who propounded the question.

"You are up against only one—I didn't vote for the Patman bill," chuckled Senator Glass.

But Morgenthau would not be drawn into an inflation discussion, finally pleading that it would not be proper for him to talk on that subject while the bonus bill was before the President. After the President disposed of the measure, he said, he would come back and "theorize about money for you, if you wish."

Rudolf S. Hecht, president of the American Bankers Association, testified against the bill, presenting objections prepared and previously made public by his organization.

John Edson Works On 89th Birthday

John Joy Edson, beloved financier and civic leader of Washington, was at his desk as usual yesterday, despite the fact he was celebrating his eighty-ninth birthday.

Hale and hearty, Mr. Edson, president of the Equitable Cooperative Building Association and chairman of the Washington Loan & Trust Co., predicted that his lifelong philosophy of hard work and faith in American fundamentals will bring prosperity back to the Nation.

"We have been through a bad depression, that is true," observed Mr. Edson, "but we have always had them in the past and come through them. Morale of the people has been low. Adherence to the principles of our pioneering forefathers will restore confidence and bring recovery."

Mr. Edson has not missed a day's work in three and a half years. He has not even taken a vacation.

British, French Will Take Hand In African Row

Will Insist Upon Right to Advise Italy Regarding Ethiopia.

By the Associated Press.

London, May 17.—Great Britain and France will insist upon their right to advise Italy regarding its treatment of Ethiopia under terms of promises made by Premier Mussolini at the recent Stresa conference, it was said authoritatively tonight.

The three powers will hold private conversations in Geneva next week on the subject, it was disclosed, at which time the Anglo-French stand will be made clear.

The entire cabinet held special meetings today and discussed both the threat of war between Italy and Ethiopia and Great Britain's plans for expansion of her air forces.

Confer With Drummond.

British officials conferred with Sir Eric Drummond, Ambassador to Rome, who was called home for consultations after Mussolini's bristling warning to other powers to keep "hands off" the Italo-Ethiopia dispute.

Although the council of the League of Nations meets Monday in Geneva on the Ethiopian question, the Anglo-Franco-Italian talks will be carried on separately. Capt. Anthony Eden, Lord Privy Seal, will leave for Geneva tomorrow.

Rumors that Mussolini, angry at Britain's moves to try to prevent a war, had refused to see Drummond before the latter's departure for London, were officially spiked.

Strained Relations Denied.

An Italian announcement said Il Duce had granted the Ambassador an interview. The only information obtained from British quarters, however, was that he had seen only Fulvio Suvich, Italian undersecretary for foreign affairs. (A Rome dispatch said Drummond and Mussolini conferred briefly before the former's departure.)

Officials of the Italian Embassy emphatically asserted there has been no straining of relations between their country and Great Britain.

Semi-official quarters expressed hope the tri-power conversations at Geneva would prevent any definite step in the dispute by the League Council. England fears Italy might become angry and walk out of the League, an action which would seriously cripple the international body and current peace efforts.

replied that "I haven't yet planned to write a book."

Other NRA executives, including W. Averell Harriman, administrative officer, are expected to resign with the expiration of the present act.

Lawyer for Brotherhood.

Richberg first attracted attention in Washington as counsel for NRA under General Hugh S. Johnson. He came here from Chicago where he had been a lawyer for railroad brotherhoods.

He rapidly rose to a position of confidence in the Administration, for a time being referred to by many as "assistant president." His New Deal career, however, has been a stormy one.

He quarreled with Gen. Johnson over reorganization of the Recovery Administration. Johnson was succeeded by a board headed by S. Clay Williams, while Richberg continued as NRA counsel, at the same time serving as director of the Emergency Council.

With resignation of Williams, Richberg was named NRA head. Meanwhile, bitterness with organized labor developed over renewal of the automobile code and over the cigarette code. Labor leaders accused him of being a traitor. With reorganization of the board, however, this quarrel subsided.

With formation of the new Works Relief Administration, Richberg was relieved of his duties as Emergency Council director and was succeeded by Frank C. Walker.

At the present time, Richberg is engaged in the hardest fight of his New Deal career, that of attempting to put through Congress his plan for NRA extension. He personally represented the NRA in the Supreme Court arguments in the Schechter case.

Mark W. Cresap, president of the Clothing Manufacturers Association of the United States of America, sent a letter to President Roosevelt in which he declared that a two-year extension of NRA in its present form is vital to the men's clothing industry. He submitted figures showing that in March, 1935, 147,000 workers were employed in the industry, as compared with 109,000 in March, 1933. The weekly pay roll, he said, increased from $1,400,000 to $3,200,000.

The general executive board of the Amalgamated Garment Workers of America sent a letter to the House Ways and Means Committee urging two-year extension.

Comptroller General McCarl settled the question of the exact hour of expiration of NRA under the present law. He ruled yesterday that it continued until midnight of June 16, which falls on Sunday.

Found Body of Annapolis Boy

A two-day search, in which midshipmen and Navy planes and boats joined, ended when Alvin Shaw (left) and Bruce Stallings found the body of Frank Sazama, jr., in Weems Creek, near Annapolis.

see if anyone had caught sight of the boy passing. Agents of an insurance company also took the field with other searching parties.

Boy, 15, Finds Body.

The body was discovered by 15-year-old Alvin Shaw. He was exploring the bottom of the creek with a pair of oyster tongs. Fifty feet from the shore, as he stood on the highway bridge, his tongs caught something, in 12½ feet of water.

Excitedly Shaw called William B. Marshall and James Craig, who were standing nearby on the bridge watching the search. When the three of them brought up the tongs the boy's arm was caught between the metal jaws.

Police Magistrate Louis Strauss and Deputy Sheriffs John L. Bush and Arthur F. Fendlay took charge of the watersoaked body as it lay on the roadway.

No marks of violence were found on Frank's body, and Magistrate Strauss, acting coroner, issued a verdict of accidental death by drowning. He said no inquest was necessary.

Then it was that Frank Sazama, 52-year-old father of the youngster, was called from his home on a bluff overlooking the creek and the bridge.

Nice Sends Sympathy.

Gov. and Mrs. Harry W. Nice were among the hundreds of persons who sent messages of sympathy to the bereaved parents of the boy. Their message read:

"Our hearts go out in sympathy to you and your wife, and, while we know that mere words are but little comfort, yet we both desire you to believe that our most fervent prayer is that God, in His mercy, will give you sustaining strength in this, your dark hour of trial."

Arrangements have been made for the funeral of the lad to be held from St. Martin's Lutheran Church, Annapolis, at 3 p. m. Sunday. Services will be conducted jointly by the pastor, the Rev. S. G. Schick, and Commander William N. Thomas, chaplain of the Naval Academy.

Senate Group Votes Broader Security Plan

Blind Aid Added, Annuity Restored to Bill Passed by House.

ating $3,000,000 for the next fiscal year and necessary amounts thereafter, to enable each State to furnish financial assistance to the needy blind. Federal contributions would match State aid, up to $15 a month.

2. The social security board, set up to administer the act, is transferred to the Department of Labor.

3. Jurisdiction over grants to States for aid to dependent children is transferred from the social security board to the Children's Bureau of the Department of Labor.

4. States are permitted to establish unemployment insurance sytems on an individual or company reserve plan, instead of merely a State "pool fund" basis, as provided by the House. This would make possible operation of the famous Wisconsin plan, as well as the "pool" method.

5. To stimulate steady employment, employers who have stabilized their employment over a number of years so well that their reserves are adequate and the State allows them to reduce their contributions, the Federal Government must recognize this by allowing such employers an additional credit against a Federal tax.

6. A one-half of 1 per cent penalty tax a month is proposed on employers whose Federal tax payments are overdue.

Passage Expected.

The gargantuan bill, embodying a sweeping pay roll tax program expected to yield $2,783,200,000 annually for old-age pensions and unemployment insurance, is expected to pass the Senate after bitter opposition.

Protest cropped out at yesterday's Finance Committee meeting, with Senator Walter F. George (Democrat), Georgia, vainly offering a substitute for Titles 2 and 8, dealing with the compulsory annuity system. Senator William H. King (Democrat), Utah, backed up the Georgian.

"The establishment of a compulsory annuity system for substantially all workers of the country is beyond the powers of Congress," Senator King told the committee.

If the matter ever comes before the Supreme Court, King said, a majority "can hardly help but conclude that both titles are part and parcel of an insurance scheme" and Congress has no authority to levy taxes for any such system.

A dissenting minority report will be filed by Senator Hastings.

The bill, appropriating $49,750,000 for the first year of operation, permits the Federal Government to make grants to the States on a matching basis, up to $15 a month, for needy persons over 65.

Aside from this so-called "charity" arrangement, another system of Federal old-age benefits would begin in 1942, applicable to workers on reaching 65. These would receive monthly pensions based on their salaries, but in no case more than $85 a month or less than $10. The Senate committee yesterday stipulated that the worker must retire to draw a benefit at 65. A tax of 3 per cent on pay rolls against both employers and employes, would be levied to finance the plan.

Unemployment insurance benefits would be fixed by State laws. To finance unemployment insurance, a tax of 3 per cent in 1938 would be levied on pay rolls of all employers of more than 10 persons, with farm labor, domestics and casual workers exempted.

Grants in aid would be made to the States for aid to dependent children, maternity and child welfare cases, and for promoting State public health services.

The committee vote to restore voluntary annuities to the bill yesterday, follows:

Against—King, Connally, Lonergan, Gerry and Metcalf—5.

The committee vote on the Hastings motion to strike the compulsory annuity system from the bill follows:

4 Perish in Fire Razing Convent

Nuns Flee in Night Clothes as Flames Envelop Quebec School.

By the Associated Press.

Joliette, Quebec, May 17.—Fire destroyed the convent and normal school of the sisters of the congregation of Notre Dame early today, taking four lives, as 50 pupils and 100 aged pensioners and nuns escaped from the blazing building in night attire.

Three firemen perished when a wall fell on them. Sister Ste. Helene de la Croix, 75, died of a heart attack as she aided others in arousing the children and leading them from the building, which was destroyed.

The firemen were Louis Chartier, 32; Guibert Fleury, 50, and Oscar Ferland, 23. Jean Lecuyer, 42, a volunteer fireman, was seriously injured.

Originating in the kitchens of the old brick and stone building, the flames rapidly spread to the upper floors. A long line of nuns, pupils and pensioners in night attire filed down the stairs in orderly fashion, although flames crackled near them and smoke curled up the stair walls.

Sister Ste. Helene collapsed and died in a nearby building where she and the others had sought refuge.

Fire trucks from Montreal, 43 miles southwest of here, aided in preventing the flames from spreading to nearby houses and buildings. Nearly every male resident of this town of 11,000 aided in fighting the fire.

The cause of the blaze remained uncertain.

planned to take 1,000,000 farm families off relief rolls by making them loans to be paid back over a period of years.

The Government's intention to push the Passamaquoddy project as one of its first major undertakings under the works program was further revealed with appointment of Maj. Philip B. Fleming, former deputy administrator of public works, as engineer in charge. Maj. Fleming was recently succeeded in the works administration by Col. Horatio B. Haskett.

Meanwhile, it was revealed that allotments of $1,620,200 for local works relief projects would go to 19 cities. Ten of the allotments are on a loan and grant basis and nine are grants only. These projects included sewers, school buildings, an auditorium, a bridge, and park improvements.

Highway and rivers and harbors projects are expected to be the first to get under way when the questions of wages and hours are solved. This work will be done directly by the Government under supervision of Army engineers.

RAILROADING UTILITIES TO DESTRUCTION

TESTIMONY that passage of the Utility Bill will mean destruction of property of American citizens and political control of their local utility companies remains unrefuted. Yet, Senator Wheeler's Committee on Interstate Commerce has recommended to the Senate a bill which retains all the destructive features of the original draft.

The new bill still proposes to wipe out ruthlessly utility holding companies. It still places local utility service under stifling bureaucratic control from Washington.

BILL RUSHED THROUGH COMMITTEE

The Committee did not take very seriously this matter of destroying the investment of millions of American citizens. Its public hearings were brief; attendance by committee members was almost perfunctory. The Associated Gas and Electric Company requested an opportunity to appear and state its case, but this was denied. Failing to get permission to appear, the Company filed arguments against the bill, but Senator Wheeler's own report shows that these statements were not even included in the printed record of the hearings available for study by Committee members in connection with their consideration of the bill.

One of the members of the Committee denounced the action leading to the report of the bill. According to newspaper accounts, he said that only eight of the 20 Committee members were present when the vote was taken, and that not more than seven or eight knew what was in the bill as finally approved by the majority. Less than an hour was allowed to digest a bill of 151 pages, he said. He and another member refused to vote because of this railroading of the bill through the Committee.

CITIZENS MUST FIGHT FOR RIGHTS

There has been no popular demand for this wholesale destruction of the property of American citizens. No utility investors, no utility customers appeared before the Senate or the House Committees to urge the passage of this bill. But hundreds of thousands of letters have been sent to Senators and Representatives in protest against it. Investors, customers, taxpayers, savings banks, State public utility commissioners, and business organizations of every kind have expressed their opposition.

This bill will usurp the powers of the States, destroy and take private property without just compensation, wreck homes, and ruin lifetime savings.

It will tie utility service in a mass of red tape which will surely result in higher costs and poorer service for the consumer; it can even lead to a national system of government ownership of utilities.

The bill means more government in business, and that means more burdens for taxpayers.

Every American citizen should protest to his Senators in Congress against this grave injustice to himself and to his neighbors.

Insist that they vote against the Wheeler Utility Bill.

An Elderly Lady Protests to Her Senator

DEAR SIR:

I am appealing to you as my representative in the Senate to protect me from the injustice of this proposed utility legislation.

I have worked and saved for the past thirty-five years, hoping that when the time came that I could no longer work that I would have enough income to support myself without appealing to charity. My savings are almost entirely invested in public utility holding company bonds. They were purchased over a period of years and always with the thought that I was a conservative investor. I left speculation to others.

If there has been wrongdoing in any of these companies and correction is needed, surely there must be some way of curing a pimple on the hand without cutting off the whole arm.

I am in favor of corrective legislation always, but when it goes beyond that and becomes destructive to the rights of millions of citizens in my position, I feel that as an innocent victim I must protest and ask you to give careful thought before allowing this vicious bill to become part of the law of our land.

Yours very truly,

New York, N. Y.

Tomlinson Seeks Additional Marks

Flier Tries Again After Cracking 5 Records.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 17.—With five new international speed and load records on the books, D. W. Tomlinson and Joseph E. Bartles, Transcontinental and Western Air Line pilots, ordered their record-setting plane conditioned tonight for another attempt at additional world marks tomorrow.

The TWA pilots rang up the new figures, including nine United States records, when they set their twin-motored Douglas airliner down at Floyd Bennett field early this morning after a 3,100-mile closed course flight that kept them in the air nearly 19 hours.

In tomorrow's flight they hope to surpass the French mark of 174.7 miles an hour over 1,000 kilometers (621 miles) with a 1,000-kilogram (approximately one ton) load, and to set new world marks over 1,000 and 2,000 kilometers with a double load of 2,000 kilograms.

"We expect to boost our average speed of 190 miles an hour," Tomlinson said tonight.

Flannagan to Renew Cumberland Park Fight

By the Associated Press.

A new effort will be made by Representative Flannagan, of Bristol, to have the rugged mountain region of the Breaks of the Cumberland developed into a State park.

The Virginian said yesterday he would seek to obtain out of works-relief money a sum sufficient to buy under the submarginal land purchase program from 10,000 to 20,000 acres on Big Sandy River. His idea is for the Government to turn over the lands to Virginia for development and maintenance as a recreational area. The area lies in Buchannan and Dickinson counties.

Chain Store Tax Plan Is Argued in Court

Fredericksburg, Va., May 17 (AP). An early decision by Judge Frederick V. Coleman in the case in which chain store operators attacked the validity of Fredericksburg's tax on multiple operation of retail outlets, is anticipated, following arguments today in corporation court.

The tax, which complainants' counsel argued was unconstitutional, has been in effect about two years and has been paid by the operators under protest. A suit previously filed in Federal court in Richmond was dismissed for lack of jurisdiction.

Moore Relates Fairfax History To U.D.C. Body

County Saw Last Battle and First Casualty in Civil War.

The first man killed and the last battle of the War Between the States occurred in Fairfax County, Va., Assistant Secretary of State R. Walton Moore told the district convention of the United Daughters of the Confederacy, which was held in the historic courthouse at Fairfax, Va.

Giving the convention his personal recollections of the events that occurred in Fairfax County, Secretary Moore, a native and resident of the town, pointed out that John Peyton Anderson, of Rappahannock County, the first man wounded in the war, was about 1 mile east of the town on the Lee highway when shot. The real engagements preceding the Battle of Bull Run were fought in the town and Capt. John Quincy Marr, of the Warrenton Rifles, was the first man killed in the conflict.

Secretary Moore stated that much of his information concerning the events of the war were related to him by Col. John Mosby, famed for his raid on the rectory of the old Zion Church and the capture of the Union Brig. Gen. Stoughton which led to President Lincoln's question of "How many mules did they get? I can get all the generals I want, but the mules are hard to replace."

The convention was told that the last battle of the war was fought at Wolf Run Shoals on Bull Run between Fairfax County and Prince William County. This occurred the day following Lee's surrender at Appomattox.

The convention concluded yesterday afternoon with the dedication of a marker in the Confederate enclosure of the Fairfax Cemetery. The earlier part of the day was devoted to hearing the reports from the 77 delegates representing the 26 chapters in northern Virginia. The program included talks by Mrs. Severn C. Nottingham, of Orange, Va., the State president of the order, and Mrs. Bessie Ferguson Cary, of Front Royal, State historian. Mrs. Robert Hutchinson, of Manassas, district chairman, presided at the convention.

Germans Build Torpedo Boats Of Midget Size

Copyright, 1935, by the Associated Press.

Berlin, May 17.—Rearming Germany's newest naval weapon—swift, deadly "vest pocket" torpedo boats as revolutionary as her "vest pocket" battleships—was revealed today.

Foreign naval experts stationed here said the Reich, moving swiftly, already has constructed 450 tiny speedboats, capable of 60 knots each and manned by five men and carrying four torpedoes.

A second similar development, the experts said, is another speedboat twice as large, carrying ten men and having an operating range of almost 2,000 miles.

Advantages Listed.

Naval observers here, asserting the new baby men-of-war would give other powers as much food for thought as the Reich's recently disclosed plans to build 250-ton submarines, listed these major advantages of the craft:

1. Their cost is little and their operation economical.
2. Their crew is small; at the worst, only five lives are lost.
3. They are so small and can change direction so fast they would be hard to hit.
4. Their four torpedoes, with any kind of luck, can do terrific damage to enemy ships. In any case, the "Water Bugs" could worry and nettle an enemy.

The new naval weapon was disclosed even as more cold water was thrown on suggestions that Pierre Laval, French foreign minister, might stop over in Berlin on his way home from Moscow and Warsaw and talk to Reichsfuehrer Adolf Hitler face to face.

Laval Likely to Go to Geneva.

Reports from Poland, where Laval is attending funeral services for Marshal Joseph Pilsudski, said the Frenchman expressed his intention to go from Krakow, where Pilsudski will be buried tomorrow, directly to Geneva for the League of Nations council meeting next week.

At the same time foreign officials sought to impress on impulsive Nazi leaders who thought a personal meeting between Hitler and Laval could but do good that such a meeting must be prepared with the same care with which the visit of Sir John Simon, British foreign secretary, was prepared.

While hope still existed that the Frenchman might be persuaded to come to Berlin in the near future, there appeared little likelihood the meeting could be arranged to climax Laval's present junket through eastern Europe.

Hitler Reported Apprehensive.

In the face of an official assertion that Laval's visit now was "hardly in the realm of possibilities," diplomatic quarters voiced the belief that Hitler was growing more and more apprehensive at the Russo-Franco-Czechoslovakian system of mutual assistance pacts and hence might be inclined to "talk turkey" with the French.

Meanwhile, Germany's submarine plans were semi-officially disclosed when Rear Admiral Gadow, writing in the Deutsche Allegemeine Zeintug, said the new 250-ton craft were necessary because "the Baltic countries have at least 50 submarines."

Today's developments served to focus the spotlight on Hitler's address before the Reichstag Tuesday evening in which he is expected to lay the course for Germany's foreign policy in the immediate future.

Nine County Institutions to Hold Commencements Next Week.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Harrisonburg, Va., May 17.—Nine Rockingham County high schools will complete their sessions next week with the awarding of diplomas to 176 boys and girls.

Baccalaureate sermons will be delivered to the graduates of the majority of the schools Sunday and the commencement exercises will be held Monday night. Two of the schools hold their final programs Friday night while another will not close until Thursday.

The others range from 20 down to 6 for Keezletown, the county's youngest accredited high school. Winchester, Va., May 17.—Perry Greenwalt, 31, of Freeport, Ill., who came to this city about eight months ago and has since been employed as a mechanic and in other lines of work, is being held in connection with eight robberies, several of which involved Baltimore & Ohio and Pennsylvania stations in this city and at Stephenson, Va.

According to police, Greenwalt has confessed complicity in all of the robberies reported. Police say Greenwalt admitted entering the Baltimore & Ohio station twice, the Pennsylvania station twice, the Baltimore & Ohio station at Stephenson once, the Virginia Feed Mill, and the Lupton Orchard Building twice taking a truck, later recovered, and a passenger car.

An Embassy For China.

The importance of their diplomatic and commercial relations largely determines whether two nations shall exchange Ambassadors, which involves the establishment of Embassies; or Ministers, who represent their countries in legations. The distinction is admittedly somewhat arbitrary. When the United States sends a Minister to Haiti, for instance, that country can be represented only by a Minister in Washington, even though for Haiti diplomatic relations with the United States are more important than in the case of any other country.

For that reason it is always a welcome move when a great power decides to elevate the status of a legation to that of embassy. Such action by the United States in China is particularly appropriate. It will be desirable not merely because merited by China's importance and the tradition of excellent Sino-American relations, but also because legations in China, instead of embassies, are essentially a heritage of the Boxer Rebellion 35 years ago. After this anti-foreign outburst the status of legation for China was emphasized as a mark of that country's inferior position with regard to the great powers.

When Soviet Russia, shortly after the war, decided to exchange Ambassadors instead of Ministers with China it became inevitable that other countries would follow her example in due course. That the United States, Great Britain and Japan should now move to follow the Russian lead is a minor, but not unimportant, indication of improving Asiatic stability. The gesture by this country is particularly appropriate as a certain offset to the evil effects on China of our silver-purchase policy. Indeed Minister Sze would probably prefer us to drop that policy rather than to become first Chinese Ambassador to the United States, richly as he deserves the title.

Unharnessed Tides.

By tentatively allocating $1,091,802,200 for work-relief projects in one sweeping move, the President's advisory committee on allotments has run true to form. This committee was set up only a few weeks ago. It has had no opportunity properly to examine the projects which it has approved. At best it has merely gone through the process of segregating the most-favored projects and sending them to the President for a final O. K.

In spite of this slap-dash procedure, the list of approved undertakings contains a large number of sound projects. Since the decision on principle with regard to work relief has been made, no one will question the desirability of eliminating grade crossings, or replacing slums by modern, low-cost housing units. Fortunately a considerable portion of the funds already earmarked will flow into projects of this kind. But these allocations are all too frequently mingled with grants that represent political expediency rather than engineering judgment.

The speed with which the allocation board has acted is explained, although it may not be justified, by the desire of the Administration to create as many jobs as possible within a brief period. But even that objective does not account for the allotment of funds for wholly impractical ventures. The classical example, of course, is the scheme to use the tides of Passamaquoddy Bay to generate electric power. Both the Federal Power Commission and the PWA previously punctured the Passamaquoddy bubble, only to have it swell to new brilliance at the White House.

It is possible to make the tides of Fundy light farmhouses and turn cream separators, but who can justify the expenditure of $100,000,000 on such an experiment in a sparsely settled region where no large market for power will be available after it has been developed? Even the board which has made the allotment appears skeptical: for it has set aside only $10,000,000 to initiate the work of tide harnessing. Apparently Congress will have to appropriate from three to ten times that sum before this sop to Maine for her recent political leanings will be completely financed.

Many months ago the President announced a plan apparently intended to prevent just such procedure as this. The National Resources Board was inaugurated, with a great fanfare, to study the field of public improvements and guide the Administration in making expenditures for that purpose. What part is that agency playing in the present allocation of funds? It is inconceivable that it would have approved the inclusion of Passamaquoddy among the first list of projects now announced.

Rallying To The Defense.

The dispute between the Senate and the House as to the terms on which the NRA shall be permitted to continue has created a legislative stalemate threatening the very existence of the recovery organization. Confronted by this situation, its defenders are making their voices audible above the clamor of critics and are examining the dire consequences of legislative inaction.

Perhaps it is salutary to have the issue of "to be or not to be" raised clearly at this juncture, because so long as industrialists and labor leaders felt sure that the NRA would be extended they were inclined to take its benefits for granted and to criticize those provisions of the law which exacted from them a quid pro quo. As a result there has been a tendency to underrate the strength of the general support accorded the recovery administration and to exaggerate the hostility aroused by some of its policies.

Congress may be surprised to hear that many organized industries, now operating under codes, are already making plans for continuing their joint activities under the guidance of voluntary trade associations, in case the recovery act is not prolonged. So much has been said about the difficulties of interpreting and enforcing collective bargaining provisions that it is also worth noting that the A. F. of L. favors extension of the NRA, while the head of the United Textile Workers is conducting an active campaign to secure support for a two-year prolongation.

Confronted by the mere possibility that they may have to revert to a condition of unregulated competition, it is safe to conclude that large numbers of industries, large as well as small, together with their employes, will join the ranks of NRA defenders. That does not indicate that the present law is satisfactory in all respects, nor does it require hasty revision in advance of a decision regarding its constitutionality. A simple agreement to extend the recovery act for a limited period in substantially its present form would enable Congress to escape from an awkward situation, and avert a threatened national misfortune.

If the recovery act were permitted to expire, many industries forced to operate without the protection of codes would turn to their trade associations for enforcement of rules of fair practice. Voluntary agreements of this sort would in that event often conflict with the rigid provisions of the antitrust laws, which would be restored to full force and vigor. Congress would certainly not welcome a development that removed organized trade activities from governmental control and encouraged evasion of the law. On the other hand, the Administration would be reluctant to institute suits against industries trying to carry out a program of self-regulation along lines suggested by the NRA.

Extinction of the NRA would also carry with it elimination of section 7(a), which has provided a basis for collective bargaining between employers and employes. Despite the conflicts that have arisen over interpretation of this section, its value has recently been conspicuously demonstrated by the amicable settlement of conflicts within the automobile industry. Employers will have cause for regret, therefore, if Section 7(a) should lapse through failure to extend the recovery act, or if it should be superseded by the more restrictive provisions of the Wagner bill.

In view of the serious disturbances that would result from failure to prolong the recovery act, it seems highly probable, therefore, that Congress will be bombarded with petitions from both labor and capital on behalf of the NRA. The danger of an untimely end can assuredly be averted by vigorous presentation of the positive and permanent benefits which it is capable of conferring upon the country.

Virgin Islands Fiasco.

After all the sound and the fury about the administration or maladministration of the Virgin Islands, the announcement that the Senate investigating proceedings have suddenly been postponed comes with all the deafening silence of a mammoth dud.

Following their purchase from Denmark in 1917, in the interests of protecting the Panama Canal, the islands next came into the public eye when President Hoover visited the islands and came away declaring they were the Nation's "poorhouse." With the appointment of a non-political administrator in the person of Gov. Pearson, these dependencies dropped from public ken only to reappear within recent months on the publication of a long collection of charges of corruption and malfeasance from the pen of a former assistant to the Governor. A bewildered public next heard that the Senate had taken cognizance of these charges and planned an immediate investigation.

There was some question as to the wisdom of detaching any Senator from more pressing duties. Senator Clark suddenly resigned from the special investigating committee. Senator Tydings decided not to go. Then Senator Reynolds went, along with special counsel and investigators. Gov. Pearson indicated his pleasure at the prospect of a full inquiry. The Interior Department's Division of Territories and Insular Possessions told off members of its legal staff to accompany the party and represent the island government in the projected hearings.

Now, only a few weeks after, the investigation is postponed until next fall. Auditors remain to scrutinize the administrative books of the island. Senator Reynolds, en route back to Washington, announces in disgusted tones that the islands might best be sold back to Denmark. The returning attorneys of the Interior Department report that privileges of cross-examination were denied them although full assurance of their rights had been pledged the Federal authorities when the investigation was first announced.

In the meantime, a cloud of unproven allegations hangs over the head of Gov. Pearson. The relief and reconstruction program of the islands necessarily marks time. The charges and countercharges begin again. Something is rotten somewhere, in one camp or the other, and the hearings are postponed. What sort of procedure is all this?

The Wagner Bill.

The Wagner bill, which has passed the Senate by an overwhelming majority, has come to be regarded as a substitute for section 7(a) of the recovery act. It is, however, a more far-reaching measure, authorizing a much greater degree of governmental regulation of employer-employe relationships and setting up more rigid machinery for giving effect to collective bargaining.

Although section 7(a) has been criticized for its ambiguity and for failure effectively to guarantee the rights of workers to be represented by individuals of their own choosing, it provided a basis for the gradual development of labor organization adapted both to the needs of different industries and to varying social and economic conditions. Except for the stupidly obstructive attitude of some employing groups, the country might have made rapid progress toward amicable negotiation of wages and hours agreements under section 7(a). As it is, pressure upon Congress to pass the Wagner bill has grown in intensity, and the chances now strongly favor its ultimate enactment into law.

If proponents of the Wagner bill are correct, it will not effect any revolutionary changes in the methods of collective bargaining that were being worked out slowly and sometimes painfully under the recovery act. Certainly company unions are not banned unless they are demonstrably company-dominated—which makes it curious that this provision should have been so strongly opposed by many who claim to believe in collective bargaining. The bill does establish the majority rule as the test of the representative character of a labor organization. But the principle of majority rule was in a fair way to be accepted without resort to legislative coercion. In short, the immediate objectives of the Wagner bill might have been—probably would have been—attained in time through the more flexible system of bargaining provided for under existing laws.

Only by such means is it possible to build up intelligent and self-reliant labor unions which can establish their rights without calling upon the Government to define and defend them, and the courts to enforce them against employers. A bill which guarantees labor's rights without emphasizing its responsibilities is not in the best interests of labor, not to mention other elements in the community. It leaves no room for the type of free bargaining that is characteristic of an independent labor organization prepared to make reasonable concessions as well as to insist upon justifiable rights.

Paternalism of the sort exemplified by the Wagner bill leads to new types of conflict, economic and legal, and may ultimately fasten upon the country a fascist type of labor-union organization wholly dominated by the Government. The more trade unionism relies upon governmental support the more it becomes subject to governmental dictation. That is axiomatic.

Biography Of Biograph.

Another landmark in New York City is being reduced to dust and mortar this week by efficient, overalled workmen. Thus the old Biograph Studio passes into legend with its big-eyed heroines, its handsome, broad-shouldered heroes and its inevitable dark, mustached villains. It was on this site that hundreds of wronged mothers were driven out of papier-mache homes into cotton snow by irate fathers. In those days, public enemies Nos. 1 to 100 were invariably Indians with designs on covered wagons. Subtlety was an unknown quality, comedy was a pie in the face and tragedy an exaggerated heaving of the shoulders accompanied by gallons of glycerin.

It was at that studio on Fourteenth street that D. W. Griffith, working under almost unbelievable and sometimes ludicrous handicaps, managed to give the public the best of what was then hardly more than a noble experiment. It was there also that "America's Sweetheart" first burst from the cocoon of nonentity as "The Biograph Girl." In these days, when perfectly appointed, portable dressing rooms have all the modern conveniences of a miniature bungalow, it is difficult to realize that Lillian Gish once cheerfully painted her own quarters, which were distinguishable as a star's only because they contained a basin and pitcher.

But in spite of such hardships, or perhaps because of them, the business of "flickers" gradually rose until it now ranks creditably among America's large industries. Exotic foreign actresses, temperament and fabulous salaries were unknown when the American Mutoscope and Biograph Company organized thirty years ago. Home talent, hard work and heart-breaking handicap alone wrought the miracle of the silver sheet. In a few days, the Biograph Studio will be no more. But the magic begun in that Fourteenth street studio of long ago has gone further today than its most optimistic pioneers even dared dream.

A Congressman suggests that bunk be eliminated from the Congressional Record. It's just the job for the scientist who recently removed the odor from cabbage.

Alexandria Abattoir?

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: Several weeks ago I attended a meeting of the city council of Alexandria to register a protest against the possibility, no matter how remote of the introduction of a nuisance into our beloved town, said nuisance an abattoir, the polite name for slaughterhouse, with all its attendant horrors—the necessary accommodation, if only for a few hours daily, of distressed, bellowing cattle and then that most repulsive of all odors, the slaughterhouse stench.

It is useless to talk to the initiated of unobjectionable "modern methods," the fact remains that such plants are known to be so obnoxious that it is difficult to gain admittance for the industry. I hear that our neighbor, Rosslyn, has refused to harbor the concern now knocking at our doors.

In the West on the wide windswept plains such establishments may be set up, and communities of those interested grow up around them. I happen to have visited a large Western city within the last few years, where the occupants of a house ten miles from a "modern abattoir" were compelled, when the wind set from that quarter, to leave the porch and take refuge behind closed windows.

It is not difficult to imagine what such a condition would mean to all Alexandrians, rich and poor, during the summer season.

Alexandria has her own unique advantages and possibilities. Let her welcome any of the usual industries and commercial activities, but never a slaughterhouse.

It has been said that the slaughterhouse in question would also benefit the town by affording employment, in peak times to as many as 1,400 persons. But would these persons be our own citizens? Would not such work require experts in the business, and if 1,400 strangers were brought into town, hundreds of whom would be for months laid off, would they not cause very long division in relief funds already inadequate?

Religion In Civics.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: It is not to be assumed that the public of Washington will be highly elated over the new plan to divide the police and firemen into organized religious creeds. A man's religion should be his own private affair, not a matter of civic organization.

If Washington is to continue to have efficient operation of the Police and the Fire Departments, the officials should foster unity rather than schism. The test should be are you a "good" policeman, a "good" fireman, and not are you a "good" Catholic or a "good" Protestant, or a "good" Mormon, or a "good" Jew. It takes no prophet to foretell that organized cliques spell ruination of harmony. The side that can wrest control will give the vanquished short shrift.

The Commissioners should discourage these segregations. Let the police and firemen, as individuals, have every religious freedom to their hearts content, but hands off officially.

Washington Budget.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: In reply to "Observer" in The Post of May 14, I wish to say that I am a Government worker, salary $1,320 per year, or about $106 per month.

My rent is $35; heating in the winter cost about $9 per month; light and gas about $4.50 per month; I pay $25 per month on furniture; $4.22 for a radio.

I have a 3-year-old car which costs me between $10 and $15 per month for gas and oil.

Please note that I have not spent a cent for food or clothes.

Woman's Place.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: I venture to disagree with the writer of "Shall Washington Wives Hold Jobs?"

The gist of her communication was as follows: Married women work because their families need their earnings; by no stretch of the imagination can they be accused of depriving men of jobs in the manufacturing industries; the right to work is an inalienable human right, and no state or nation that believes in justice and freedom can fail to recognize this truth.

I believe a glance at the shekels expended by working married women for clothes, cosmetics, beauty treatments, etc., would soon dispel the notion "they are working because their families need their earnings."

So far as inalienable rights are concerned, the possibility of a return to normalcy while women continue to usurp man's place in business and indulge the fetish for material independence, equality, etc., is quite remote.

More than 50 per cent of all arrests in the United States are confined to youngsters between 18 and 25. If married women stayed home and reared their youngsters properly it would be a lot easier on the taxpayer. It is useless to waste words on employed married women without children who lavish their affection on the kind of poodle that looks and smells like a mop.

No Pink Teas.

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: After reading Malvina Lindsay's article in The Post of May 10 entitled "Organized Women's Groups Limit Their Effectiveness by Using 'Pink Tea' Methods," which is most ably and intelligently written, may I presume to offer a few suggestions in the interest of her page, but more particularly women themselves?

My reaction to her article, and many appearing on the Woman's Page, is, instead of so many criticisms, knocks and kicks about the stupid ways of women, which attitude is more or less paramount in the majority of them, we could better qualify the women of America for the foremost place and highest standards with constructive suggestions; that is, point out the right, intelligent, effective and best ways of doing things rather than always elaborating upon their faults, as though dealing with children.

As to "pink tea" methods, may I say, last session of Congress I was one of the principal few who put the nationality bill through Congress, and at times the entire responsibility of the bill rested upon my legislative endeavors, as Alabama, my home State, was of particular political significance. I never saw a tea during my several months' work on this bill, the only bill which did not have the approval of the President that finally passed and became a law. Miss Alice Paul, myself and her other "chief lieutenants" conferred into the wee hours of the night upon necessary legislative procedure without even thinking of a "pink tea."

Bay State's Answer to Lee Detractors

To the Editor of The Post—Sir: A Massachusetts man commorant in Washington seeks space to comment on a tactless resolution printed in the local papers and alleged to have been adopted by some Massachusetts ladies reflecting on the memory of Gen. Robert E. Lee. These good women, designated as the W. R. C., object to a monument at Arlington in honor of one of the great soldiers of the world, at the same time applying the term "traitor"—harsh word from the lips of ladies without authority to speak for the Old Bay State.

The objectionable dispatch from Boston having been printed, early answer should be made, lest the thoughtless believe the reproach represents the spirit of the State. Fortunately we have at hand the official answer of Massachusetts, made almost exactly one year ago, May 18, 1934, by our distinguished Senator, David I. Walsh.

At the proceedings in the rotunda of the Capitol, on the acceptance of the statues of Washington and Lee our eloquent Senator was honored on behalf of the Congress to accept Virginia's contribution to the National Hall of Fame.

Senator Walsh in his exordium referred to the "formal consecration in the Hall of Fame of these statues of two of America's immortals." "Much as I appreciate the privilege and honor thus conferred upon me," he said, "I realize that it is not to me personally but rather to my native State—Massachusetts. The animosities engendered by the Civil War have long since been obliterated. Whatever the spirit of sectionalism, if there be any such spirit today, it does not exist between Massachusetts Bay and Jamestown.

"We now unite in proclaiming Lee a national hero. And again I advert to the happy circumstance that it is a successor to Charles Sumner in the Senate of the United States from Massachusetts who stands here to give official expression to this sentiment on behalf of Congress, and, may I be permitted to add, on behalf of the Nation."

Thus spoke Massachusetts. Five months later Senator Walsh was elected for the fourth time to the Senate by the astounding majority of 300,000 votes. For devoted loyalty and freedom from fickleness joined with intensity of indorsement, no Senator from Massachusetts ever received the measure of support so generously tendered David I. Walsh.

This should be sufficient answer to the detractors of Lee.

The Post Impressionist

Treasure-Trove.

Post Office, Saturday.

WHILE half the esthetic world is occupied with plowing or condemning new fields for art, one insufficiently vocal group of men is engaged in reopening an ancient field that has lain too largely neglected for more than five centuries. To the skill and delicacy of an American archeologist has been entrusted the task of uncovering and preserving the mosaics of St. Sophia in what is now Istanbul, in what was once Constantinople.

This archeologist is Thomas Whittemore, of Boston. His mandate has been secured from the Turkish government. His supporters are the members of the Byzantine Institute. They believe that their efforts not only will increase interest in a long forgotten past which should always have been remembered, but may also reveal a debt of the most modern art to the art of old Byzantium.

The latter's legacy actively survived in the cloisters of Mount Athos, but only rarely left them. It lingered in the iconography of Russia until the Bolshevik Revolution, but it traveled little until the dispersal resulting therefrom. Then, however, exiled artists bore it with them westward. "Today," says a bulletin of the Institute, "we study it with respect and expectancy almost approaching awe."

There is, indeed, a quiet Byzantine revival.

In his recent "Adventures in Ideas," Dr. Alfred Whitehead, Harvard professor of philosophy, writes: "The distinction separating the Byzantines . . . from the Romans is that the Romans were themselves derivin, the civilization which they spread. In their hands it assumed a frozen form. Thought halted, and literature copied. The Byzantines . . . were themselves the civilization. Thus their culture retained its intrinsic energies, sustained by physical and spiritual adventure."

Certainly "the approach to art by the aristocratic Byzantine mind was different from that of the Western artist, whether ancient Greek, Gothic, classical Italian, or modern inheritor of those traditions." Nevertheless, the modern art which is not among the inheritors bears a distinct relation to "the spirit that endowed the world with Byzantine architecture, Byzantine music and ceremony," Byzantine painting and mosaics.

Of these St. Sophia was a treasure-house which came into being a thousand years before "the hand that rounded Peter's dome." Even Gibbon grows lyric in his description, invoking legend and justifying it, the Emperor Justinian's Church of the Divine Wisdom was "the most illustrious of Christian shrines."

But, because of its very beauties, it tempted the vandal. "The sacrilegious hands of Western Christians robbed it of its wealth accumulated to the service of God"—so that bull in puts it—and "all that was portable was stolen from the church when, in 1204, the city was sacked by the fateful Fourth Crusade." Then, when at last the Saracens took Constantinople, they covered the mosaics with heavy coats of paint to which their successors have added through the following years.

Those mosaics were among the St. Sophia's greatest glories. "The extensive wall-surface shone with the gold and colors of an art that was developed in Byzantium to the height of its possibility . . . examples illustrating the art of many centuries between the sixth and the fifteenth."

They were dimly approached by the mosaics in Salonika, but the mosaics of Salonika perished in the World War. There were some excellent Byzantine mosaics in historic Nicaea, but fire destroyed them. "The disaster of restoration has impaired the Italian examples." Only under the layers of white paint in St. Sophia have remained such treasures "in the state in which they were left by the artists."

And these the present government of Turkey has at last agreed shall be uncovered. . .

Funds, apparently, are another matter. Mr. Whittemore, and the Byzantine Institute, it seems, must see to them.

Nevertheless, the Institute's directors bear names that are promises of success. Mr. Whittemore himself is one of the best known of American archeologists. The president is John Shapley, professor of art at the University of Chicago. The treasurer is former Secretary of the Navy Charles Francis Adams.

THE WHIPPING POST.

"The Senate passed . . . a bill to reimburse the State of California $6,462,145 it spent to aid the Federal Government during the War Between the States. It also approved a measure to pay Baltimore, Md. $171,034 for constructing defenses in 1963." So said the United Press recently, as this very own newspaper of ours reported it. The Bonus.

MUCH of the outcome on the bonus bill will depend, it is believed, on the referendum which, because of the peculiar condition in our midst, will presumably be taken among the officials of Mr. Roosevelt's Administration. Heretofore this has not been necessary, because it was always assumed the President spoke for the Administration. Now we have a crowd of individualists, however, and it is apparent they are split all over the place.

The only thing to do, it would seem, is to have a ballot of the officials before the Senate votes on the question of overriding the President's veto, which we are assured by Steve Early is to be strong—as strong as it can possibly be to show that he really is against the bonus and not interested in the political aspects of it as had been reported, undoubtedly by unfriendly sources.

• • • •

At the ballot box Mr. Roosevelt and Mr. Garner could serve as watchers, the President for the anti-bonus side and Mr. Garner for the bonus side. This would insure a fair vote and we should all unhesitatingly abide by the result.

A heated campaign of buttonholing, the like of which we seldom see here in the Nation's Capital, not excepting the Red Cross and veterans' poppy campaigns, could be expected to precede the voting. Mr. Roosevelt would have to work particularly hard, if he expected to win, because as it stands now he has on his side, at least publicly, only Secretary Morgenthau who agrees with him that the bonus is harmful. But the Patmanites have two officials openly on their side, Governor Eccles of the Federal Reserve Board and Jesse Jones, who say it is not harmful. If the Senate is to be required to vote on matters as they stand now it should obviously override the veto. The count stands 3 to 2. For the bonus are Messrs. Garner, Jones and Eccles. In fairness to Mr. Eccles, he hasn't said he was for the bonus. He said it wouldn't hurt. It's hard to see how he could be against it then. Against the bonus and thinking it would hurt are Messrs. Roosevelt and Morgenthau.

Well, under majority rule, which this Administration is so wedded to, the veto on this basis should certainly be overridden.

• • • •

But there is a vast horde of officials who have not been heard from and who are certainly entitled, under the circumstances, to voice their opinion. It may be expected in the campaigning that Mr. Roosevelt will pick up several more votes. He ought to be able to get Judge Hull, Dan Roper, Jim Farley, Secretary Swanson and Secretary Dern, at least. He ought to be able, in fact, to do quite well among the Democrats of his official family because they would likely jump at the opportunity of participating in the government with him in at least one instance. These five, added to himself and Secretary Morgenthau, make seven to the Patmanites three.

The vast reservoir of officials here, however, has not been touched and when Mr. Roosevelt has gotten all the regular Democrats there is a question as to whether he has not exhausted his strength.

• • • •

As to which side would get Donald Richberg is a moot question, of course. There are those who say he would give another neat exhibition of straddling the fence. Mr. Ickes is a progressive, and if there is anything more progressive than overriding the President's veto in a matter of the bonus and printing press money it does not come readily to mind.

Similarly, Harry Hopkins is just too big-hearted not to want to give the veterans this bonus and he can't be expected to be concerned about the details as to how it is given to them. With Henry Wallace and Harry Hopkins it is a new day and it is not believed they would vote to sustain the President, which would be decidedly of the old order, when the President was expected, at least, to be the boss of his official family. If they did not go along with the insurrectionists in this their attitude might be misconstrued as favoring orderliness, a stigma which neither of them would like to carry. It is really a question of how the referendum will come out, but individuality in the Administration must be preserved at all costs.

The Farmer's Boot-Straps

Midwest Listens To Davis' Enthusiasm For New Deal Farm Prices, But Reflect On Factors Conveniently Omitted In Recent Discussion Of Gains.

By Hildring Siversen.
Special Correspondence of The Post.

Kansas City.

THE interview given by Chester C. Davis of the Department of Agriculture Saturday, May 11, as to the effect of the AAA upon the price of farm products is interesting for its omissions and for the naive way in which Administration spokesmen claim credit for specific instances of improvement, conveniently ignoring various vital factors.

He takes specific crops, such as corn, and points out that the corn price increased from 38.9 cents a bushel on May 15, 1933 to 85.2 cents on April 15, 1935. He also says that hogs increased from 3.88 cents a pound at the beginning of the period to 7.88 cents a pound. Cotton increased from 8.2 cents a pound to 11.7 cents a pound in the same period.

There are many factors which contribute to make such figures meaningless, but the whole situation is so complex that an extended discussion is impossible, so only five factors will be mentioned.

• • • •

THE drouth. It is conservatively estimated that not less than 50 per cent of the improvement in prices is due to the unprecedented dry weather. Approach the problem from another angle. It is assumed that Mr. Davis would claim that the New Deal has been good for all agriculture. If that is correct, then it can not be willing to claim credit for good coming to certain favored agricultural sections unless it is equally willing to offset it by losses to other agricultural sections, since even an observer with schoolboy economic training knows that the gain of the rain-favored farmer arises from the loss of the drouth-scourged one and vice versa. It is therefore necessary to calculate the direct government relief given to farmers in the drouth-scourged regions, and their losses caused by drouth, such as sacrificing starving cattle and hogs, and deduct these as an offset from the total benefit to agriculture in general that is alleged to have accrued from New Deal policies. Not that the New Deal was responsible for the drouth, but it should not claim credit for any part of a condition that has no relation to its policies. Surely Mr. Davis must agree to this.

Farmers are large buyers of farm products. If a farmer raises both corn and hogs, he may have derived benefit from the higher prices of both corn and hogs, with exceptions noted below. If he raises only hogs and has had to buy his corn, the benefit is questionable, or probably a minus quantity. According to Mr. Davis' own figures, the price of corn increased almost 120 per cent while the price of hogs was increasing somewhat less than 100 per cent. So what? If the farmer has to buy cotton or other products coming under the AAA, he is hit by the same kind of a brickbat.

The NRA and other New Deal agencies have brought higher prices on many manufactured products the farmer has to buy. What has become of the famous bird "parity?" It has several windows out of which to fly while the farmer is trying to put salt on its tail by the AAA formula.

THERE is a marked decrease in consumption of several farm products and a consequent deterioration of domestic markets caused by higher prices—whether these higher prices are due to the AAA or other factors. Hogs are high, and bacon disappears from the breakfast table in favor of mackerel. Even Cape Cod has guns trained on the "parity" bird. We are getting a dose of peace-time Ersatz.

If the AAA does actually bring about a reduction in the crop, as it seems to have come nearest to doing in the case of cotton, it encourages foreign countries to compete because of higher prices. Those higher prices, from whatever cause, may be a shot in the arm to make the cotton farmer feel a sensation of exhilaration while the shots are going on, but there is a hangover in the morning when he realizes that other countries can raise cotton, too, and are anxious to do so when the export price gets attractively high. He realizes that the restriction of acreage may eventually operate to destroy the cotton farmer's foreign market altogether.

Mr. Davis is quoted as saying that he believes the AAA is the "logical and natural answer to the farm problem."

If he arrives at this conclusion by a one-track ratiocination whereby higher prices on specific products are used as the sole measuring stick, regardless of all the cross-currents, he would do well to make a more exhaustive study of the whole farm situation, and he can find material in his own Bureau of Agricultural Economics.

• • • •

THAT bureau publishes a chart showing the packers' margins at Chicago, and the chart plainly proves that the farmer is the man who pays the processing tax on hogs. Every time the processing tax has been increased, the packers' operating margin has been consequently widened. The Department of Agriculture in its propaganda department has industriously sought to give the impression that the processing tax is paid by the packers or consumers, while in its statistical department it proves conclusively that neither the consumer nor the packer pays the tax.

If this performance is typical of the whole AAA set-up, it shows that the AAA is nothing but an exhibition of bureaucratic bootstrap lifting. And it is a pretty expensive one, because it takes plenty of the people's tax money to support the vast army of employes required to enforce the provisions of the AAA.

There are important readjustments going on. People are shifting about. Some are quitting the city and getting out of the breadline to raise a few chickens and a cow or hog or two, on a patch of farmland. Just what are the economic implications of this process? Is it a bad thing? Since crop reduction, or "control," as it is more euphoniously called, seems to be the big thing, would it be better to prevent people from going back to the soil and adding to the alleged overproduction, and feed them at Government expense at a Government soup-house. If so, why the subsistence homesteads? Don't they compete with real farmers?

• • • •

WHEN one contemplates the contradictory phases within the New Deal structure, he is bound to smile at the naive, cocksure process of pointing to prices and saying, "I told you so." And then, of course, there are other contradictions and complexities which are inherent to the situation New Deal or no New Deal.

The Middle West farmers are beginning to ask pertinent questions pertaining to the five points mentioned, as well as others. No agricultural policy founded on temporary hocus-pocus relief or shot-in-the-arm exhilaration will long satisfy them. Little by little a calm analysis is proceeding and progressing. It may be a fortunate thing in the long run that all the various kinds of bootstrap-lifting are to be tried out during this highly experimental Administration, once and for all. By a process of trial and error the American farmer will thereby arrive at a substantial philosophy grounded upon actual facts that will stand a long and grueling process of testing. The fallacies that are becoming increasingly evident in the AAA are highly educational.

Old Indian Hatchet Found.

Yarmouth, Mass. (U.P.).—Perhaps an old Indian camping ground was uncovered when Carlton A. Farnsworth discovered a well preserved Indian hatchet. Though the handle had rotted away, and the thongs that were once attached to the sharpened blade had gone, one could detect the grooved center in which the handle had fitted.

Siamese Kittens Born.

Toronto, Ont. (U.P.).—Four kittens, joined together, one in two places, together with a fifth born separately, are alive and well here, after Dr. J. S. Holm, veterinary, operated on them to separate them. Dr. Holm says all the kittens will live, having survived the multiple operation successfully. The kittens are normal in every respect.

Nevada to Get Pheasants.

Reno, Nev. (U.P.).—Plans to stock 1,000 pheasants in Nevada this fall are under way by the State Fish and Game Commission. The commission also plans to stock 200 chucker partridges, a specie native to India, which have been introduced in Oregon and California and are expected to be thriving there.

Huge Lemon Grown.

Millvale, Pa. (U.P.).—George Matlika has raised and nursed along a one-and-a-half pound "hothouse" lemon. Though he has no notion of making the Florida-California controversy a three-corned fight he offers the lemon and a half-pound sister as a target for the citrus growers to shoot at.

Cat-Rabbits Born.

Leachville, Ark. (U.P.).—Cats, or rabbits, or both? R. A. Metcalf, farmer, has a year-old cat which recently gave birth to what he terms "cat-rabbits." Their ears are between those of a cat and a rabbit, and they have feet and tails like a cat, but hop around like little rabbits, Metcalf explained.

California Tourists Increase.

San Francisco (U.P.).—Automobile tourist arrivals in San Francisco and northern California have increased for the nineteenth consecutive month, Californians, Inc., announced. For the first three months of 1935, approximately 97,089 tourists checked here, an increase of 36.5 per cent.

Freedom Of Conscience

By

Grif Alexander

In St. Mary's City.

IN St. Marys City today at 3 o'clock, the State of Maryland will officially accept from its 23 counties the gift of a statue, the work of Hans Schuler. It is called "Freedom of Conscience" and I am a little sorry it isn't called "Toleration" instead.

It is true that though Conscience (self-knowledge, self-appraisement, self-judgment) can not be otherwise than free, free as thought, "freedom of conscience" has come to mean the right to speak and act in accordance with the dictates of the inner mentor. But Toleration (the allowance of that which is not approved) is, I am convinced, the better term; it is a good, round, rolling word, with more humanity in it and less high hat; a word that means all that Freedom of Conscience means and something more, since it not only implies one's own rights but takes cognizance of the rights of others.

Toleration comes in many guises, not all of them wholly noble, but why cavil? It comes as modesty, which concedes the possibility that the other fellow is right; as amused pity for the other fellow so palpably in the wrong; as expedience, which reminds one that if one is cruel the other fellow may some day retaliate in kind; but whatever its form it is sound in mind and heart.

And call it what you will, St. Marys City is the place for the statue and Marylanders have reason to be proud of the event; for it was at this spot that a very new and very definite step was taken toward true liberty.

• • • •

IT is not surprising, in the circumstances, that some of us, now and then, take a little more credit than is our due. Freedom of conscience was not Maryland's gift to the world; nor did it originate with any one group of men, political, religious or racial. Rather it was an isolated growth in ever so many groups; was usually cultivated and cherished in secret; and every forward step it made was made apologetically.

And for this there was excellent reason. If there had been in existence any such body as Tolerationists they would have been more cordially hated than any other sect in the world, for every member would have been considered a traitor to his own cause. For the oppressed to become the oppressor, when opportunity came, was the most natural thing in the world.

Thomas Dudley, Governor of the Massachusetts Bay Colony, in a screed addressed to Roger Williams, aptly and succinctly presents the case of the orthodox:

Let men of God in courts and churches watch
O'er such as do a toleration hatch,
Lest that ill egg bring forth a cockatrice
To poison all with heresy and vice.

To hate the heretic was cardinal doctrine, whatever the church, and toleration was abomination.

In return for which the Tolerationists, men ahead of their time, invariably reflected honor and glory on the sects to which they belonged. Which is quite as it should be. Laggard feet have followed in the steps of the early enlightened. One has to be tolerant to appreciate toleration. The world is a better world than it used to be.

• • • •

WHEN Sir George Calvert became a Roman Catholic and announced the fact he showed courage of a high type. He stood to lose more of wealth and power than he could hope to gain. Catholics were at the moment being oppressed in England. He dreamed of a colony in the New World where his coreligionists would have equal rights with others to worship as they saw fit, and to that end he secured a charter from a Protestant King.

That he died before Maryland was settled does not disturb the continuity of his vision, for Cecil Calvert was his father's own son. For the first 15 years of its existence the Palatinate was an ideal commonwealth in so far as religious freedom was concerned.

Neither the toleration act of 1649 nor the second act concerning religion five years later marked the beginning of toleration in Maryland. They marked a time when a limit was placed on such liberty. To define freedom is to give it metes and bounds. Despite all Lord Baltimore could do to mitigate their rigors the laws were harsh and cruel, prescribing heavy penalties for nonconformity to the prevailing modes of worship. On the other hand, there is convincing evidence of religious liberty in the silence of provincial records up to that time.

And, happily, following the brief fanatical periods, toleration resumed its even tenor and has so continued to this day. Here in Maryland was established the first government on this continent in which church and state were kept apart. And here in Maryland it was definitely set forth for the first time that in the matter of appointing men to office the applicants should be judged solely by their ability to perform the duties required of them and that no distinction was to be made in the matter of their religion. This was the practice from the beginning of the colony, but it first appears in black and white in Gov. Stone's commission, made out by Cecil, second Lord Baltimore.

Hopes for Better Times With Funds From Sale of Vegetables.

By the United Press.

Springfield, Mo.—It is a long road that has no turning and Mrs. Emma Kennemer, having shepherded her nine children through a hard winter with $3, a few pieces of old furniture and a decrepit automobile as a starter, is looking forward to the summer for a final drive to put her fatherless family on its feet again.

Two days after last Christmas, her husband died and when the bills had been paid up, only $3 remained of the insurance money. Three months later, the owner of the little farm house seven miles east of here in which the family had lived and made its way on meager earnings from sale of milk and cream asked the place be vacated so his son and his family might move in.

Mrs. Kennemer piled her family of three girls and six boys—ranging from 2 to 17 years—into the rickety old automobile, together with some old furniture and the $3 she had not touched and started out. They had no place to go.

Home Built in Clearing.

They had driven less than a mile when they came to a grassy clearing in a heavily wooded section where a farm house had burned several years ago. The owner of the land said the family might live on the site.

A crude "dining hall" was constructed by the oldest of the children, Levant, from scrap lumber, nails and the top of an old tent. A part of the $3 went for an old tent, which served as two "bed rooms" and two other beds were placed in a nearby tumbledown barn.

That was the family's home from early March, and Mrs. Kennemer believes that better times are ahead with money to be made from vegetables this summer and the hope that Levant will have found a job by the time winter rolls around.

Children Continue in School.

"The children, all except Levant, went right on to school after we moved here," Mrs. Kennemer said. Dorothy is in senior high in Springfield. She lives with her uncle. The others went to a rural school north of here and did very well."

"We have a two-acre garden now and we hope to sell a lot of vegetabls this summer. What we need most is clothes. The children have been going barefoot for two weeks."

On Human Nature

By

Wm. Lyon Phelps.

AS a rule, knowledge is more difficult to obtain than things merely imagined; it is easier to imagine oneself a millionaire or a king or a boxing champion than to be one. It is easier to imagine a future state after death than to obtain definite knowledge about its conditions.

But in one respect I think knowledge is easier than imagination. We know that we are going to die, every one of us; but do you believe that we can really imagine ourselves dead? I doubt it. We may have the lot in the cemetery selected, we may have made provision for our funeral; we know that after our death the world will go on. But do you believe that one can imagine oneself dead, nonexistent? I doubt it.

I wish I could remember where I read it; it may have been in one of the narratives of criminals by that astonishing writer, William Roughead. Anyhow, there was a true account of a criminal who, on the morning of his execution, had to walk from his cell 50 yards or so to the place where he would be executed. It had been raining the night before. The condemned man avoided every mud-puddle with the same care that he would have taken had he been going to return from his destination.

A student told me once that he had abandoned all belief in religion and morality; it was his sincere conviction that both were mere superstitions. But he said it made him angry that he could not live up or live down to his creed. He wanted to live a selfish and self-satisfying life, and it made him both puzzled and angry that he could not. He was chaste, he was honest, he was altruistic, and why?

Well, in Bernard Shaw's brilliant melodrama, "The Devil's Disciple," the hero, who has no principles or convictions of any kind, offers his life for another man, when there is not the slightest necessity for his doing so. Mr. Shaw insisted (and quite rightly) that he had no motive for this sublime sacrifice. One of the theater managers could not understand this, so he made the hero in love with the woman, which enraged Bernard Shaw.

When I was a little child, I was sitting on a bench in the public Green of New Haven. Two adult toughs, evidently boon companions, came and sat down on the same bench. One of them began to curse and swear in an absolute stream of blasphemies; the other said to him, "Don't swear before the child." It was not because I looked shocked; I had heard all these words.

In the story called "The Constant Nymph" there is a refined, educated, aristocratic young lady, who had never used an improper expression. But, after falling in love, and having her jealousy suddenly aroused, she surprised herself by pouring out a stream of profane invectives. They came fluently from her mouth, yet it was the first time that she had been aware that she even knew such words.

WASHINGTON'S BEST-DRESSED MEN BEAR WITNESS TO THE QUALITY AND STYLE OF OUR WONDERFUL LINES

CLOTHING AND FURNISHINGS

Our Men's Shop is really an extraordinary shop and its growing business indicates the high regard in which it is held. It is conveniently located, just inside our 14th Street Door, and once you've enjoyed the distinction of our goods you will never be satisfied with wearing any others.

New lines of Summer suits now to be seen . . . from the best makers, of linens, tropical materials . . . and our own famous "Icemere" suits for hot weather . . . also Topcoats . . . Hats . . . Shoes and wonderful furnishings. Do call today to see them.

"Mama," whispered little Willie as the great conductor took his place in the orchestra pit and the famous soprano began her aria, "what's the man shaking the stick at her for?"

"Shut up!" Mama explained. "That's his baton. He isn't shaking it at her."

"Then what's she hollerin' for?"

That, we are sad to report, is little Willie's reaction to good music. The case of his sister is even worse. She just loves to prattle about how much she adores good music, but when she has an opportunity to listen to a great symphony she stays home and tunes the radio to Cab Calloway's band. She thinks that arpeggio is an island in the Pacific and that Chaikovski was a Russian general. You see, little Willie and his sister have not read the excellent articles by Ray C. B. Brown in The Washington Post; and, therefore, are not en rapport with things musical. But there is hope for them even now, and we are starting a subscription to The Post for them in order that they may learn the intellectual pleasure to be derived from listening to classical music.

Mr. Brown is one of America's best known music critics, and his authoritative, intelligent, sensitive articles are required reading for music lovers. Washington is becoming more and more music conscious, and The Post is proud of the part Mr. Brown has played in explaining the works of great composers to new listeners. For two years he was managing editor of Musical America and his writings are studied closely by students. In his "Postlude" column, discussing the programs presented by symphony orchestras, choral groups and others, he strikes a new note in criticism.

Like his good friend, Dr. Sigmund Spaeth, the "tune detector," Mr. Brown can listen to Tin Pan Alley's latest song hit and tell you instantly the symphony from which the theme was stolen, and, if you question him closely, he might remember the older work from which the symphony composer borrowed a few bars!

In The Sunday Post you'll find an entire page devoted to music, and the leading article, always written by Mr. Brown, will give you a deeper, more sympathetic understanding of all things musical. Nowadays, when Stravinski's "Firebird" suite is discussed at the dinner table along with the New Deal and Europe's war scare, you'll find Ray C. B. Brown's brilliant articles of great help in convincing your hostess that you, too, can recognize Bloch's "Schelomo" and that you can discuss Hindemith with the best of them. If you are a lover of good music you'll appreciate his clear, authentic criticisms; if you are just learning to listen to the great symphonies you'll demand his help. You'll find it in

Among the citations which comprise the lesson-sermon is the following from the Bible: "Shew me thy ways, O Lord; teach me thy paths." (Pslams 25:4.)

The lesson-sermon also includes the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures," by Mary Baker Eddy: "Mortals must gravitate Godward, their affections and aims grow spiritual; they must near the broader interpretations of being, and gain some proper sense of the infinite, in order that sin and mortality may be cut off."

Charles Justice Awarded Expenses to New York for Juvenile Prowess.

To be the boxing and wrestling champion of the District, leader in attendance, participation in club activities, and behavior in the Boys Club of Washington, all rolled in one, is a big order for any boy, but club officials say that Charles Justice, 14, is "it."

Charles, who lives at 212 Indiana avenue northwest, was yesterday presented a check covering expenses to the Boys Club convention in New York next week by members of the Cissy Club, local fishing and hunting organization, which has made the same award to the outstanding boy in the local Boys Club for several years.

This is the fourteenth annual award of the kind sponsored by the Boys Club. The first award, it was pointed out yesterday, was a gold watch given by John Hays Hammond, and the recipient of the watch followed the example of the donor in becoming an engineer. Presentation was made yesterday by T. Ormonde Nichols, local attorney, who is president of the Cissy Club, and C. C. Lipp, founder of the club and now vice president.

Police Recover Body From Potomac River

Harbor Police yesterday recovered the body of Aloysius White, 42, retired railroad man of 410 F street southwest, who was drowned Sunday when he fell into the Potomac near Hains Point from the deck of his cabin cruiser.

White's body was found down the river, three-quarters of a mile past the mouth of Four Mile Run. It was brought back to the District Morgue. Coroner A. Magruder MacDonald probably will issue a certificate of accidental death.

The cruiser was anchored when the drowning occurred. White, who was with two friends, Mrs. H. Johnson and Miss Anna M. Gibson, both of 4100 Fourteenth street northwest, was pulling up the anchor when he fell overboard.

Tree Nursery Planned In Yellowstone Park

Because the teeth of the mountain pine beetle are so sharp, a tree nursery is to be built in Yellowstone National Park, according to an announcement yesterday by the National Park Service.

The beetles have become so obnoxious out there that the white-bark and lodgepole pine are in danger of extinction, so the park service decided to build a nursery where trees might be bred to replace those killed and denuded. Funds will come from a previous allotment by the Public Works Administration.

Miss Winder Will Speak.

"American Messiahs"

UNOFFICIAL OBSERVER

who also wrote

"THE NEW DEALERS"

says

"IT SO happens that I have been in constant, if skeptical, contact with most of the American Messiahs since long before the advent of Roosevelt and the New Deal. I regard them as indispensable irritants, since they supply the motive power for essential change.

"They have become the most formidably vociferous element in our public life.

"And, here they are: the mavericks, the wild men, the reformers, the men with Plans and Formulas, the fellows who have it in their power—if they can hold their followings—to wreck the New Deal, with the very best of intentions.

"It is useless to resent them, for they are part of our very selves."

NOTE: "American Messiahs" does not necessarily reflect the editorial opinion of The Washington Post. We have no hesitancy in asserting, however, that no more fascinatingly interesting material has yet been written concerning the political figures with which the book deals.

AND the story that The Unofficial Observer tells in this thought-provoking book is one that you can not afford to miss. Its material is political dynamite . . . for he has pictured these "Messiahs of the Moment" in bold, fearless strokes—the Longs, Coughlins, Townsends, Sinclairs, Olsons, La Follettes and others.

A year ago, The Post gave Washington "The New Dealers" . . . in advance of publication by Simon and Schuster.

"American Messiahs" is an even more interesting, more important book. And, once again, The Post brings it to its readers, exclusively, in advance of book publication.

"American Messiahs" begins tomorrow in The Post. It will continue, daily and Sunday, through June 9.

WASHINGTON'S FASTEST GROWING NEWSPAPER

Jubilee Party Entertained By Lindsays

Large Group of Guests Visits the British Embassy.

Event Honors the 25th Anniversary of Coronation.

By Evelyn Peyton Gordon.

The Ambassador of Great Britain and Lady Lindsay entertained yesterday afternoon at a reception and garden party in celebration of the silver jubilee of King George V. The party was planned for Monday, May 6, the twenty-fifth anniversary of the coronation of King George, but inclement weather forced postponement of the event.

And it was well worth waiting for, as the weather yesterday was perfect, and the gardens of the embassy at their very loveliest. Hundreds of smart motors lined Massachusetts avenue between 4 and 6 o'clock, carrying members of diplomatic, official and residential society to the great entrance of the residence where guests passed the scarlet-coated major domo in his huge busby of black fur, making him appear exaggeratedly tall, and on up the red-carpeted marble stairway to the hall above. Hanging along the staircase are life-sized portraits of King George and Queen Mary in their coronation robes, and on the other side portraits of the late King Edward VII and Queen Alexandra.

Then on through a series of drawing rooms, handsome and deserted, to the wide portico overlooking the gardens, where the hosts received the guests. There is no lovelier view of the panorama of Washington than that from the terrace of the British Embassy, high above the city, and surrounded by spreading lawns and formal gardens, terraces and tennis courts. Lady Lindsay wore a gown of rose, beige and navy blue printed chiffon fashioned with pleated jabots of the same material, and a redingote of navy blue wool, with a wide-brimmed blue straw hat.

Variety of Refreshments.

On a high terrace, a band played during the afternoon, and below a huge marquee was raised over a buffet where tea, ices, and a great variety of refreshments were served. Guests gathered here or wandered up to the highest terrace to see the swimming pool, or stood in groups at one end of the lower terrace to drink toasts to the king with the delicious punch.

Flowered chiffons and crepes with wide-brimmed colorful hats for the ladies, and formal afternoon attire for the men, with even a few in flannels, was the fashion of the day. Trailing frocks and silk hats and wide borders of blue and purple iris, snowy hedges of bridal wreath, all made a vivid and charming picture.

Some of the interesting group glimpsed yesterday were the Secretary of State and Mrs. Cordell Hull, with the latter's niece, Miss Witz, a pretty miss in black and white, chatting with Gen. John J. Pershing; the Chief Justice and Mrs. Charles Evans Hughes, and nearby Associate Justice and Mrs. Harlan Fiske Stone and Associate Justice and Mrs. Pierce Butler. Chief Justice and Mrs. Alfred A. Wheat arriving with Mme. Lombard, wife of the Military Attache of the French Embassy; Mrs. Robert Low Bacon, wife of Representative Bacon, in a frock of pansy blue crepe, with Mrs. Chester Bolton, wife of Representative Bolton, and the Minister of Hungary, Mr. John Pelenyi.

The Secretary of War and Mrs. George H. Dern with their daughter, Miss Betsy Dern, and pretty Miss Eleanor Roosevelt, in a navy blue and white costume, with her mother, Mrs. Henry Latrobe Roosevelt; the Commandant of the Marine Corps and Mrs. John H. Russell, and young Lieut. Fletcher Cole. Mrs. Beatrice Beck Tuck, very handsome in a printed crepe frock chatting with the Assistant Secretary of Labor, Mr. Turner Battle.

Assist Hostess.

Ladies of the embassy staff assisted Lady Lindsay, and were charming additions to the party. Mrs. H. O. Chalkly, wife of the Commercial Counselor, wore a garden frock of white organdie, with a large hat of Alice blue, and Mrs. Heywood, wife of the Commercial Secretary, was in rose pink printed with Navy blue, with a hat of the pink. Mrs. Harold Sims, wife of the Attache of the embassy, was in a printed suit of green and white silk, with a large leghorn hat, and her husband was busy with a movie camera, while the Rumanian Minister, Mr. Charles Davila, chatted and watched the making of the pictures.

Almost the entire Diplomatic Corps was there, too many to name, wives and daughters of the envoys all charmingly arrayed in gay frocks. The Polish Embassy was not represented, as the ambassador and his staff are observing official mourning for the late Joseph Pilsudski, Marshal of Poland.

A few others glimpsed were Mrs. J. Hamilton Lewis, wife of Senator Lewis; Mrs. Morris Sheppard, wife of Senator Sheppard; Representative and Mrs. Sol Bloom, Mrs. Hugo Black, wife of Senator Black; Mrs. Joseph W. Byrns, wife of the Speaker of the House; the Undersecretary of State and Mrs. William Phillips, the Assistant Secretary of State and Mrs. Wilbur Carr, Mrs. Henry Wilder Keyes, wife of Senator Keyes, and Sen and Mrs. Warren Austin.

Also Capt. and Mrs. Wilson Brown, Col. and Mrs. Edwin M. Watson, Rear Admiral and Mrs. Joseph K. Taussig, Brig. Gen. and Mrs. David Porter and Rear Admiral Emory S. Land.

Outstandingly charming were the daughters of the Cuban Ambassador, Miss Nella Veverka, daughter of the Minister of Czechoslovakia and Mme. Veverka, a group that is frequently seen together and always surrounded by a group of handsome young diplomats.

More Poetry, Less Politics Urged for 'Problem' Girl

An authority on Emily Dickinson, Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith, of Glyndon, Md., has another, even more absorbing, interest—the study of problems and the training of delinquent girls.

By Hope Ridings Miller.

THE INTERVIEW had touched on everything from the poetry of Emily Dickinson to the education of delinquent girls. Dr. Carrie Weaver Smith, of Glyndon, Md., had come to Washington as the guest of Mrs. Richard Hogue to lecture on "Emily Dickinson—Her Times and Her Women Contemporaries," before the poetry group of the American Association of University Women.

After the lecture she consented to talk more about Emily Dickinson and to recount some of her own experiences in working with delinquent girls. Divergent subjects—yes; but Dr. Smith is an authority on both.

Once you hear her draw a word picture of the times and life of her favorite poet, you will know here is a woman who probably knows more than some of the poet's biographers about "The Amherst Nun," who wrote her brief introspective verses with no thought of fame or fortune, and who died in her Massachusetts home 69 years ago today.

Contrast Emphasized.

Stressing the contrast between Emily Dickinson and her typical "female contemporaries," Dr. Smith pointed out that the poet was "no part and parcel of the period in which she lived," and explained that the average woman of her times generally occupied herself by making bead and shell work (according to the latest patterns in Godey's Ladies Book), or she adjusted her "nose machine"—guaranteed to shape the olfactory organ to its best proportions—and her "finger shapers" (designed to make her hands taper artistically) and simply sat, awaiting the homecoming of her husband.

"No wonder Emily Dickinson sought other entertainment than the company of her female contemporaries," Dr. Smith said. "No wonder she became a recluse and shut herself away in her room from the world with which she had so little in common.

"Perhaps this was the chief reason Emily took refuge in writing. Perhaps it also partially explains why her work is not 'dated,' belongs to no particular period, and is as modern in tone as if it were written today."

Dr. Smith pointed out that the few women who were writing in the 60's, 70's and 80's aimed principally to further morals, while Emily Dickenson, without any desire to teach lessons, wrote lines of rare spiritual significance, "which is another reason her work is so much appreciated in modern times."

Asked if she ever wrote verse herself, Dr. Smith replied:

"Of course I do. Everybody should write poetry, but I never try to get mine published. Not any more. Not after my first harrowing experience."

She related how she once wrote a lengthy poem and sent it to a magazine. The editor accepted it immediately and brought it out in the next issue.

"It caused such a furor that within two weeks numerous persons had requested that their subscriptions to the magazine be discontinued," said Dr. Smith. "Later, Agnes Repplier in one of her essays quoted it in full as an example of a piece of writing that—well, putting it mildly—should never have been published."

What was the subject?

"The only one I know much about—delinquent girls," she smiled. "According to critics, they are not proper subjects for poetry."

Established Training School.

But Dr. Smith thinks otherwise. Having spent much of her life studying "problem girls," she feels they deserve more poetic—and probably less political—treatment.

Soon after finishing medical school, Dr. Smith went to Texas where she became connected with a home for unmarried mothers. Later, she established a training school for girls in Gainesville, Tex., where she was superintendent for ten years "until I lost my place," she said frankly. "It was not the first job I lost because my ideas were not in keeping with the board that governed a training school."

Her next position was with the Maryland State Training School for Girls.

"I fared even worse there," she said, "and left by invitation at the end of five years." But she still believes she knows more about the proper treatment of girls in reform school than most board members of such schools, who, in her opinion, "rarely have a reason for being on the board, except that their names are in the social and political registers."

Has Progressive Ideas.

She feels a reform school should be "an educational, rather than a penal, institution; that it should be a sort of boarding school rather than a prison." She is convinced there should be a sufficient appropriation for "competent instructors to carry on work of high academic standing." She thinks reform schools should be conducted according to methods in keeping with "progressive teaching, discipline and health, rather than along lines that were followed in reform schools in 1875."

Many of these and similar ideas she has developed in a book she recently completed on the problems of training delinquent girls. She wrote the book "with the hope that some publisher will take more kindly to my ideas than reform school boards have — so far," she said with a smile.

Train Children To Play Alone, Mother Urges

Plan Which Avoids Undue Hardship Worked Out by Writer.

ARE YOU RAISING your child to be a nuisance? Is there nothing in the home sacred to meddling little fingers? If the truthful answer is "Yes," hear the recommendations set forth in the Parents' Magazine by a mother of four who believes it is never too soon to train a child to play alone and that in so doing a mother should have no compunctions nor fear she is depriving an offspring of his rights. This mother declares experience has convinced her it is as important for a youngster to learn how to play alone as it is to sleep alone, eat alone, and later to play with other children. In order that such training may be undertaken without imposing undue hardships upon babe or mother, the writer suggests:

"Before you start, get the room ready for action. Keep a sharp outlook for stray pins and buttons. Provide a variety of toys but none which could break or cut him; no toy so heavy that if drpoped, would bruise him. Be sure the playroom is perfectly safe. Then close the door on your child and forget him—if you can!

"Once out of the room, do not go back for anything. Do your thinking before you close the door. Interruptions will keep you from realizing perfection in this plan. Don't linger on your way out to play with the child or he will associate you with this room and his play and cry for you. If he should whimper, don't worry. He will soon stop. If you are nervous about leaving him alone, have a little peep hole cut in the door. Put on the child's street clothes and open wide the windows—with screen protection.

It is up to the individual parent to decide how long a child should play alone, but this mother of four declares that practically all children can be trained to play alone for several hours every day divided into morning and afternoon periods—and like it! Add to these hours during which the child sleeps and mother has five or six definite hours in which to work and to rest.

At the end of a perfect day, mother and child are delighted to see each other. Now is the time to personally conduct a tour of the house and reveal to the offspring those things which do not belong to him, are not intended for his use. If you don't think this plan will work, just try it, challenges the mother who has four times proved its advantages.

Teacher Decries Late Marriage Custom in U. S.

LATE MARRIAGES are causing a nervous strain which is threatening civilization in this country, Dr. Carl Holliday, professor of English at San Jose State College, Calif., believes.

Girls should marry at 17 or 18 instead of waiting until they are 30 or 35, the educator told his class recently, according to the Associated Press.

Most of the reason for late marriages is the desire of young American women for an easy life, Dr. Holliday is convinced.

"Women demand too much," he said. "Seventeen or 18 is the age to marry, but girls will not marry today unless they think they will be able to lead a life made easy by a complete assortment of the latest products of industrial efficiency."

He advised co-eds to pattern after their grandmothers who were content with a "shuck mattress, a coffee pot and a skillet."

Making Entries.

The more one learns about the play of the cards at Contract Bridge, the more he realizes how very important it is to pay due attention to the entries. Most of the fine plays which I discuss in this column from time to time would be impossible if the proper line of communications were not always open between two partners. Finesses, suit establishment, squeezes and almost every other department of the game leans heavily upon the right to lead, which no player ever has without an entry to his hand.

It is just as important to prevent the opponents from making full use of their own available entry-cards as to make the most of your own entries. In today's hand, the old "second-hand low" rule is disregarded, in order to rob an opponent of an entry.

1—Despite his long trump suit, South does not make a preemptive bid of three spades, for the opening one-bid accurately portrays his honor-trick holding.

2—Now, even with a minimum in honor tricks, South jumps one trick to show his great playing strength. This bid is not forcing but is a strong invitation to North to make some bid unless his hand is worthless.

The Play.

West, fearing to lead one of his tenace suits, or the club suit which had been bid by North, chose the spade ten as his opening lead. A trump from a worthless holding is often a very fine protective lead, to mark time and wait for the lead to come to your tenace holding in other suits.

East won the first trick with the Ace of spades and returned the heart deuce. South's Queen and West's Ace were played; West continued with the heart Jack, and South won and cleared trumps. South now had a losing heart and a losing diamond; his only hope of making his contract, since he had lost two tricks already, was to find some entry to dummy to discard one of his losers. He therefore tried a deceptive play, first cashing the club King and then leading a low diamond toward the dummy. He hoped that West, if he held the Ace, would play low and wait for a future opportunity to capture the King. But West was equal to the occasion; he went up with his diamond Ace. Now South could no longer obtain entry to the dummy, and was eventually forced to lead his losing heart and allow East to win the setting trick.

Comment.

If South had first led the diamond King, West would have taken exactly the opposite course in order to keep dummy out of the lead. He would have ducked, allowing the diamond King to win, and would have taken his Ace on the next round, killing dummy's Queen and consequently dummy's entry.

Dots Imparting the Dash To New Summer Frocks

This summer evening gown is doubly smart, first, because it has enormous dots scattered over it; second, because its material is a coarsely woven cotton. The background is olive green. The dots are white.

Specks Are Light, and Big, Too, on Dark Fabrics; Some Daring Ones Appear on Evening Wear; Best Effect With Tailored Frocks.

YOU WON'T be able to go far this summer without seeing specks before your eyes. Sometimes they will be no larger than pinheads. Frequently they will be spread out so they are as big as dollars. All of them will be on smart costumes, ranging from evening gowns to swim suits. For it's the dots that have dash this season.

In spite of the vogue for light clothes in the good old summertime, most of the good-looking dotted fabrics consist of dark grounds with light contrast in the form of solid circles. Designers have found that these dusky backgrounds look cool on a sultry day to say nothing of a warm night. Yet the pale dots give a delicate, summery touch.

Specks, the smallest members of the dot family, usually appear on neck kerchiefs, on shirtwaist frocks, on tailored blouses, even on hats. Dime-sized dots are at their best on swimming suits, on collar and cuff sets or on those stiff silk dresses affected by elderly ladies on Sunday.

Big Dots for Youth.

Great dots are for youth. You'll see vibrant maidens all tricked out in cool pastel linen with white dollar-sized spots rambling over them.

While the majority of big dots will show themselves by day, a few daring ones will come out with the stars. These are the dots on summer evening gowns. And the bigger the dots the simpler the lines of the dress.

Navy blue with white is always a good combination. For country club or seaside resort dances, a touch of red is often added to carry out the nautical motif. Thus a navy dress spotted in white is likely to have a red rope belt or to be accompanied by red costume jewelry.

For those who are trying to steer clear of navy, there are a host of interesting and cool-looking colors. Green, for instance. And tobacco brown or grape purple.

Effective on Tailored Frocks.

Be sure your dotted evening gown is made along plain, more or less tailored lines. This idea is much newer than the fluffy-ruffle-dots effect. In fact, the chief reason for using dollar-sized dots for formal wear is the smooth way they lend themselves to tailored lines.

Cotton, a headliner in the formal fashion parade last summer, is holding its own. You'll see cotton everywhere this season.

Coarse peasant weaves are smarter than close, fine ones. Most of them do not crush and lend themselves to a bit of drapery. And they're as cool as cool can be.

Square Necklines.

Gored skirts, square necklines, wide belts, and snug fitting hiplines are the rule in dotted cotton evening dresses. Most designers see to it that every dot stands out clearly. This means even gored skirts have no great fullness around the bottom.

Pastel dots are as fashionable as white ones. Invariably they are scattered over an extremely dark ground. Otherwise they would not show up to advantage. Pale pink and deep brown, lemon yellow and navy, apple green and grape purple are a few of the many interesting combinations.

Irish Raising More Pigs.

Ireland, long famous for its pigs, is raising more porkers than ever. Recently the pig population of the country has increased as much as 20 per cent. Plans are being made to establish bacon factories in northern Ireland. If these plans materialize the porkers will be exported in the form of ham and bacon instead of live pigs.

This BUSINESS of LIVING

By Mary Haworth.

DEAR MISS HAWORTH: Some time ago I was introduced to a man who, on first meeting, I both liked and disliked intensely. Shortly afterward, he began inviting me about. Sometimes I went, sometimes I didn't. Then, I began to find myself liking him enormously when with him. But afterward, when alone, I would feel this sense of dislike for him taking possession of me, almost like a warning. I have tried to reason it out, but can't come to any understanding of why I react as I do.

* * * *

What makes it a real problem is this: He loves me and has asked me to marry him. I have tried to explain to him how I feel; have told him about that now-I-like-you and now-I-don't sensation that I can't get away from.

* * * *

My family and friends like him well enough. In other words, they have just accepted him as one of my beaux. I am 26-years-old and have known and gone with many men. I sometimes think if I could rid myself of this unreasoning; apparently groundless dislike of this man, I could really care for him. He tells me the reason I dislike him is because he has the power of making me like him so much; that I am fighting to keep myself from caring for him; that I am afraid of life and the pain that comes to all who dare to love generously and unselfishly.

* * * *

Can this be true? And is personal cowardice at the root of my fluctuating emotions? Should I try to master this feeling, or regard it as a timely warning?

DISTRESSED.

Matured Warning.

DEAR DISTRESSED: Either we like persons whole heartedly, involuntarily as well as awarely, in their absence as well as in their presence, or we don't care for them at all, in the sense of loving them.

* * * *

I should say you were fascinated by this man; infatuated with him when you are in his presence; but that outside the circle of his magnetic attraction, you revert to reason which warns you of essential incompatability. He has rationalized, quite cleverly, the reason for your psychic distrust, but his argument isn't sound.

* * * *

Rather than attempt to overcome this feeling, I should accept it as nature's warning to give him a wide berth.

Synthetic Ginger a Menace to Health

Poisonous Element in Extract Paralyzes Consumers.

Certain Amount Still Available, Dr. Cutter Is Convinced.

By Dr. Irving S. Cutter.

FOR the past three or four years outbreaks of Jamaica ginger paralysis have appeared in widely separated areas of the United States. Many of the victims used the extract as a beverage and in one State alone between 1,500 and 2,000 cases have been reported. Most of the cases occurred following the use of artificial ginger extract. Some cases of paralysis followed the ingestion of only 6 or 8 ounces of the toxic drug.

The United States Public Health Service was able to trace the particular poisonous element and it has been identified as triorthocresol phosphate. Only an experienced chemist can detect the difference betwen the artificial and the genuine ginger extract. In the samples examined it was discovered that the poisonous element existed in a 2 per cent concentration. In the commercial world triorthocresol is used extensively as a solvent for varnishes and shellacs.

The first symptoms noted by the patient are cramp-like pains in the calves of the legs and the feet. From one to ten days later the victim finds that he has a tendency to drag his feet as he walks and, within a relatively short time, he becomes paralyzed from the hips down—the legs feeling numb. Occasionally the weakness and paralysis extend to the hands and the arms. At first the pain is severe; in fact, it may increase for the first 24 hours, usually subsiding, however, by the end of the third day. In certain patients the nerve damage is not accompanied by complete paralysis and the gait may be staggering or stumbling and resemble that of locomotor ataxia. Usually there is some shrinking or wasting of the affected muscles.

The symptoms are directly traceable to an inflammation of the nerves, and examination of the nerves themselves will show marked degeneration to the point where they are unable to carry messages to the muscles.

After the onset of paralysis or as soon as the paralysis is recognized, it is of the utmost importance that the muscles shall be maintained in proper position, otherwise contractures (deformities) may follow.

But few cases will show stomach or intestinal symptoms. As a rule bed rest is required because the patient is helpless. In most of the victims, return of function will follow in from a few weeks to a few months, as regeneration of the nerve fibers takes place.

There is no special treatment besides rest other than stopping at once the use of Jamaica ginger extract, particularly the synthetic or artificial type. Although some deaths have occurred there is reason to believe in these cases that the patient's resistance was depleted by other pre-existing disease such as involvement of the heart or the kidneys. During convalescene nutrition should be maintained at the highest possible level.

While the number of cases at this time is not large, there is little doubt but that a certain amount of the artificial ginger extract is still available. For years Jamaica ginger extract has been used as a household remedy for intestinal or digestive upsets in children, and great care will need to be exercised to insure the purity of the present-day product.

The possible existence of such forms of poisoning emphasizes the importance of local, State and national supervision over all foods and drugs sold for human consumption, and Jamaica ginger found to contain triorthocresol should be condemned and destroyed.

Hot-Weather Sandals Here In Five Styles

Jaunty Slippers Selling at Only $1.85 a Pair; New Metal Trays.

By Ruth Anne Davis.

ONE OF THE convincing signs of summer that we've seen is the new sandal department in a local store. Shelf after shelf of smart, white linen shoes! Shoes that literally beckon and call!

What's more they exercise a mighty appeal for the budget-minded, for these extraordinarily chic sandals are only $1.85 a pair!

Maybe you think that small amount isn't up to buying an honest-to-goodness smart pair of shoes? Maybe you think they'd stand about three wearings and collapse? Maybe you think they couldn't be "comfy?"

Well, you just try them and see! These shoes are sturdily built. Even if you're an inveterate shopper and pound the pavements constantly, they'll stand up under the strain. And they'll help you to do some fine standing they're so beautifully fit to the feet!

These jaunty little slippers come in five attractive styles. There are ties, oxfords, pumps, T-straps and toeless (positively scandalous!) sandals.

All these are available in sizes 3½ to 9.

Sofa Opens Into Full Bed.

Modern cave dwellers who cram their belongings into one room, kitchenette and bath should give a rousing welcome to the "Davenette." This is a small sofa which amazes you by opening out into a full-sized double bed.

It's so attractive and useful—and so reasonably priced—you should give it ranking place on your next shop-seeing tour.

New Bath Brushes.

Long-handled bath brushes are especially designed to make your bath more enjoyable and more beneficial. The bristles are just stiff enough to set your skin a-tingling as the circulation peps up.

These fine little brushes are so arranged that you may use them with or without the handle. They come in soft pastel colors or natural wood. The price of $1 is amazingly low for this particular type and quality brush.

A Sale of Hairnets.

Some women with fine fly-away hair find a hairnet indispensable. There are many who have not yet succumbed to the bob and, they depend on a net to keep the "knot" from looking straggly and soon tumbling down.

For the many thousands who make regular use of hairnets there is a wonderful sale of them in the notions department of a downtown store this week. They are selling for as little as 12 for 75 cents or 6 for 38 cents.

These nets are made by a large, nationally known firm with a splendid reputation for making only the best of hairnets.

Straw Hat Season Here.

The straw hat season is off to a running start. And so is many a man who chases his chapeau down a windy thoroughfare. But, high-ho, the season's here! There is proof on many a head!

One of the most convincing proofs you'll find in the display window of a downtown store. Here is a large straw hat, large enough for little Jack's giant. And all around it are little hats, well suited to Gulliver's Lilliputians.

Inside the store there's a choice selection of the newest in straws. Some are so lightweight they weigh scarcely anything at all. Others are air-cooled. Even panamas have the neatly ventilated crowns.

Incidentally—and this comes straight from a stylist—dark Bangkoks with white Pungaree bands are considered "the thing" this season.

Handy "Dump" for Ash Trays.

Housekeepers find that keeping the rooms free from stale cigarettes and stray ashes is considerably easier if they own one of those grand little helpers called "asherettes." This looks like a fairly large book with an ornamental metal cover. But when it's opened you find space inside for collecting the smoker's debris. This saves emptying ten ash trays during the evening, for you can put their stale contents into the asherette and empty this at your leisure.

Service Mats and Coasters.

What could be more serviceable or more attractive for the informal summer table than cork service mats and coasters to match?

These little utilities are ever so smart with the raised initial in the corner done in a darker cork.

The hostess who has coaster mats like these will be prepared to set her table in an original and thoroughly tasteful manner for luncheons, suppers or any light meal.

Tennis Racquets.

Parents whose young offspring are seized with the tennis fever find a mighty budget saver in the $1 racquets featured in a local store. These are sturdy little things, quite nice enough for the very young to learn with.

These are full-size, but slightly lighter than the average tennis racquet. Even their weight adapts them to small hands.

Family Meat Ration Should Depend On Other Foods Eaten, Dietitian Says

Here is a baked ham loaf, made to order for the spring dinner menu. It may be served either hot or cold and is at its best when accompanied by a jellied cabbage and horse-radish relish.

Per Capita Consumption of Steaks, Etc., 2½ Pounds a Week.

HOW MUCH MEAT should the family eat?

This question, pertinent the year around, is of especial interest in summer, when meat rations are popularly supposed to be lower.

Nearly everyone has a theory of how much meat should be included in the daily menu and in an attempt to solve the meat question dispassionately, Dr. Agnes Moran, of the University of California, recently conducted a study on meat consumption in the United States. Her results, published in the Woman's Home Companion, showed the yearly use of meat in this country to be about 140 pounds per person. This is a little more than 2½ pounds a week for each person, or 10 pounds a week for a family of four.

Studying the problem of how much meat should be eaten, Dr. Moran arrived at the conclusion that it should depend on what other foods were used daily. In some diets a great deal more meat can be used to advantage than in others. If cereals, peas, beans, eggs and fish are used lavishly, less meat is needed than if the succulent vegetables, fruits and milk make up the bulk of the menu.

Dr. Moran's study further showed that the gradual introduction of meat into a child's diet beginning at the end of the first year was now looked upon as desirable both for the education of food taste and for growth. Certain nutrition authorities have maintained that the store of extra iron present in the liver and other tissues of newborn infants is sufficient for normal health without other food than milk during the first year of life. This extra supply is exhausted under these conditions by the end of the first year, at which time, by a strange coincidence, many babies have their first serious infection, failure of digestion or sudden loss of weight and appetite.

The relation of meat to health is a matter of great interest. In some of the special diets formerly used for the treatment of blood, heart and kidney disturbances, meat was largely excluded on the assumption that a low diet spared the kidneys. Scientific investigation, as well as clinical experience, according to Dr. Moran's study, has shown not only that this is untrue but also that the low meat diet actually injured the patient.

An inevitable question from modern devotees of youth and fashion brings up the "fattening" tendencies of every food considered. Meat is no exception to the rule. Whenever the total energy intake is greater than the energy output of the body, no matter what food is eaten, fat will be deposited.

Organ Meats Highly Nutritious.

There is considerable difference between the muscle meat and the meat of liver, kidney and heart. The astonishing conquest of the dreaded disease, pernicious anemia, by the use of liver has called attention to the unusual nutritive qualities of the organ meats. Liver of all kinds, from beef, calf, lamb and hog, carries extraordinary amounts of almost all the vitamins, as well as certain mineral elements. Liver and kidney have eight to ten times and heart three or four times the vitamin value of muscle meat. These organ meats should have preference in planning meals for children and adults. They should not exclude the muscle cuts, of course, but are to be used in proper rotation with them.

Women who shop intelligently for food sometimes are concerned about the nutritive merits of the tender and the less tender cuts of meat. Recent painstaking work at the University of Illinois indicates that connective tissue or gristle is less usable in the body than muscle fiber. Since tough meat contains much more connective tissue than tender meat, the latter appears to have the greater nutritional value. The difference at most is not great.

The knowledge that there is little difference in the nutritive value of the tenderest cuts of meat (likewise the most expensive ones) and the less tender (which are cheaper) makes it possible for the woman who plans her menus on a limited budget and an eye to food values to make frequent use of the meat dish suggested in today's dinner menu.

Pattern No. 906.

THE RADICAL note about this likable one-piece dress is the way in which the emphasis is swung to the left. The side lacing of the blouse to the square collarless neckline, the left-front seam of the skirt, ending in an inverted pleat, and the clever matching of the stripes, all contribute smartly to the individuality of the design. And another variation of the "run-about" frock always is welcome.

This is guaranteed perfect in cut and accurate in size. It is cut in sizes 14 to 42. Size 18 (36) requires 3½ yards of 35-inch material, allowing for the skirt cut bias and the blouse crosswise.

Prize Recipe Is Submitted By Kay Smith

By Dorothea Duncan.

THE SIMPLE, inexpensive recipes for frozen desserts as well as the elaborate ones have been honored in The Post's recipe contest this week. First prize, $3, is awarded Miss Kay Smith, 1223 Vermont avenue northwest, for her recipe for Italian tortoni. Second prize, $2, goes to Mrs. Edward M. Allen, 2145 California street northwest, for Vermont maple mousse, and third prize, $1, to Mrs. Custis Russell Perry, 2018 G street northwest, for strawberry ice.

Honorable mention is awarded Miss Winifred Hamilton, 1327 Kenyon street northwest, for inexpensive ice cream; Mrs. Elizabeth Wilson, 430 Columbia street, Cumberland, Md., for rum pudding; to Mrs. Raymond Pearce, 733 Toulouse street, New Orleans, La., for frozen lime-avocado whipp, and to Mrs. H. O. Millar, 27 Blue Ridge avenue, Front Royal, Va., for apricot sherbet.

Italian Tortoni.

Ingredients: Three egg yolks, one cup milk, three egg whites, two teaspoons vanila or three teaspoons sherry wine, one-eighth teaspoon salt, one-half cup ground almond macaroons, three-quarters cup sugar, one and one-half cups whipping cream.

Method: Make a custard of the egg yolks, milk and sugar. Cool. Add the ground almonds and flavoring. Fold in the whipped cream and stiffly beaten egg whites to which the salt has been added. (Nuts or bananas or both may be added to this, if desired.) Pour mixture into freezing tray or trays of electrical refrigerator or into individual molds. Freeze same without agitation. Set control in sixth position for freezing. After this dessert has been frozen, set control to fourth position to hold until serving time. Serve 12.

Bermont Maple Mousse.

1 pint heavy cream, whipped
1 cup rich maple sirup
⅛ teaspoon salt
½ cup pecan nut meats, chopped
½ cup cooked and sweetened apricots or drained canned apricots, cut in pieces.

Whip cream, fold in other ingredients gradually and freeze in mechanical refrigerator, about four hours or more. Will serve 10 to 12 persons.

Strawberry Ice.

1 quart strawberries
2 cups sugar
Juice of 1 lemon
1 pint of water

Mash berries well, add sugar and lemon juice and stand aside for one hour. Add water, turn into pan and place in freezing compartment of refrigerator until frozen, stirring occasionally.

Inexpensive Ice Cream.

1 egg
½ cup sugar
1 cup top milk
½ pint whipping cream
1 teaspoon vanilla or lemon

Whip egg until foamy, and add sugar. Continue beating until smooth and creamy. Add top milk and mix thoroughly. Whip cream until thick, but not stiff. Add to mixture and blend well. Add flavoring and put in tray of electric refrigerator and in about 10 minutes take tray out and with a fork, scrape frozen creams from sides and bottom and beat well. Do this about three times while freezing and the result will be a smooth, delicious ice cream. This served with fresh berries or chocolate sauce makes a lovely dessert.

Rum Pudding.

4 eggs
1½ cups sugar
1 pint whipping cream
½ pint coffee cream
2 wine glasses of brandy or rum

Cream egg yolks and sugar, add brandy or rum. Whip cream until stiff, add coffee cream, then mix with the eggs. Beat the whites of the eggs until stiff and fold into other mixture. Put in freezing tray or pack in salt and ice for four hours.

Frozen Lime-Avocado Whip.

Remove rinds and sieve flesh of 3 firm, ripe, large-sized avocados. Add 1 cup powdered sugar, a pinch of salt and ¼ cup lime juice. Whip 1 large can evaporated milk and blend with mixture. This quantity serves six persons.

The avocado pulp, which does not crystallize with freezing, adds smoothness, richness and a beautiful pale green color to the cream. Its delicious, elusive flavor blends perfectly with the pungency of the lime.

For a party, mould and freeze individually or as a bombe. Have one large or six individual moulds ready chilled. Pack carefully, leaving no air spaces. Fill moulds to top. Cover with a sheet of white paper. Press down tight and seal crack with a thick layer of melted paraffin. Burry mould in cracked ice and salt, using 4 parts ice to 1 part salt. Let stand 3 hours for individual moulds; 5 for large moulds.

This mixture may also be frozen in the trays of a mechanical refrigerator. Serve with a whipped cream and crushed pistachio garnish.

Apricot Sherbet.

Soak ½ pound dried apricots overnight in 3 cups of cold water. Cook them slowly in this same water till tender and strain them. There should be about 1½ cups of juice. Next soften 2 teaspoons unflavored gelatin in 3 tablespoons cold water. Then add it to the apricot juice, along with 1-3 cup sugar, and stir until dissolved. Next put the cooked apricots through a sieve and add these to the gelatin mixture. Add 3 tablespoons lemon juice, mix thoroughly and let cool until it begins to set. Then beat with rotary egg beater till mixture is foamy and fold in 3 egg whites (beaten stiff) and ½ cup of heavy cream (beaten stiff). Add ¼ teaspoon almond extract. Mix, but do not stir or beat hard. Then pour into freezing tray and freeze about 4 hours, stirring every half hour.

Contest Open To Dishes That Use Chocolate

CHOCOLATE is the housewives' greatest ally. Frequently it is the addition of a bit of chocolate that encourages children to drink their milk or husbands to ask for a second helping of that dreaded dessert—tapioca.

Next week The Post's recipe contest will be devoted exclusively to recipes that use chocolate. Anything that smacks of chocolate ice cream, pudding, candy or cake will be eligible for entry in the contest.

Send all recipes to Dorothea Duncan, Home Economics Editor of The Washington Post. Three prizes, $3, $2 and $1 will be awarded to the persons who submit the three best recipes. Only one recipe from each contestant will be considered for a prize.

Type your recipes if possible. If not, write them neatly in ink. The name and address of the sender should appear on each sheet submitted. All recipes should be received on or before Thursday of next week.

The GAME of LIFE

By Priscilla Wayne

Ellen Dale gave up her office job to please her husband, Michael, but went back at it when there seemed no other way to help pay her mother's debts. Ellen refuses to listen when Mrs. Mallory insists Mike is seeing too much of Marjorie Hutton. But when Ellen sees them together she refuses to let Mike explain. Urged by her mother, Ellen files suit for divorce and goes to the little home to pack her belongings. She faints when Mike arrives, and Dr. Dale, Mike's father, revives her and chides them for not telling him about the baby. Confronted by the responsibility of parenthood, Mike and Ellen decide to forget about the divorce and go on as before. Mrs. Mallory is furious.

AUNT ELLEN put Mama's cup of coffee down before her. "No sense sitting there like an injured innocent Rose. Better drink your coffee.

"Ellen's not a child and neither is Mike Dale. If they use their heads; they've already called that attorney and told him they didn't want to go through with what you've started."

"You don't think they would?" Then Mama answered her own question. "Mike Dale might try it, but Ellen wouldn't. Believe me, Ellen wouldn't. Why, she promised——"

"What's a promise like that when two people love each other? Besides there may be a reason why Ellen has changed her mind. Some reason why she couldn't get a divorce now—even if she wanted to."

Mama turned eyes of blank astonishment to Aunt Ellen. "Why—why, what do you mean?"

"I mean that Ellen hasn't been looking very well lately. I've suspected——"

"What have you suspected?" Mama shrilled excitedly.

"I've suspected there might be a reason, a real nice little reason why Mike and Ellen ought to stop behaving like young fools and try to act like grownups."

Rose Mallory was incoherent. "You mean—you meean——"

Aunt Ellen swallowed a mouthful of buttered toast nonchalantly. "I mean that she's going to have a baby."

But Mama wasn't listening. She had rushed angrily from the room.

But when she got to Theodore Hardesty's office she found that Ellen had been there already.

"I told your daughter," the kindly attorney said, "to go home and forget all about it and just be happy."

Probably for Best.

Somehow, in the presence of the attorney, Mama was able to restrain her hysterics. She just patted at her eyes, weeping softly and almost silently. She was glad she'd worn her best hat and remembered, fortunately, that she mustn't rub her eyes—it made them so red.

Theodore Hardesty found himself patting at her hand consolingly.

"You mustn't take it so hard, Mrs. Mallory. It's probably all for the best. When young Dale finds out he's going to be a father it will probably steady him right down.

"I know his father and his mother. They're real folks. The boy's got a good heritage. He'll straighten up, mark my word—any man would with a beautiful wife like Ellen and the interesting responsibility that's going to be his. I've always admired you and your daughter," he continued. "I feel sure that she will be happy. And as for you and me, I think we should see more of each other. We've got lots in common."

Mama Was Happy.

Mama left, feeling almost happy, forgetting Ellen completely in what seemed more than a hint of a romance. Mr. Hardesty had suggested also that they go to dinner together that night and perhaps she'd be interested in coming to his home afterward and looking over some of his departed wife's art treasures.

The Hardestys had traveled in Europe, and from almost every foreign port the late Mrs. Hardesty had brought home art treasures of real interest and value.

"She's coming to her senses," Aunt Ellen said in relief when she saw her sister-in-law. "Maybe poor Ellen will have a little peace now."

The days slipped on.

Ellen was back at work, not because Michael wanted her to go or because she wanted to go herself, but because she felt it to be an absolute necessity.

Needed More Money.

Ellen figured finances through. If she worked three or four months it would help just that much more with Mama's finances.

She told Michael so. "I haven't any right to ask you to help. I want to do it myself. And I feel perfectly able. I'll get the washings done and maybe someone in to help here in the house with the harder work. You know I—I don't like housework."

And with that solution of their present difficulties Michael Dale had to be content. It seemed to him that it was not up to him to dictate. Ellen must do, through this tiring period, the things which she most wanted to do.

Kathleen Works told Ellen that Marjorie Hutton had left town. "I guess she saw that she couldn't do anything to win Mike over so she just gave up trying."

Still a Barrier.

But that was not the solution Ellen's troubled mind made of Marjorie's departure. She did not tell Kathleen, but, in her heart Ellen believed that Mike was longing for Marjorie and that she had gone away only because both knew their love was hopeless—Mike's duty to his wife and to the baby that was coming lay, an unescapable barrier, between them.

Work was not so easy in the weeks that followed. Mrs. Benson was critical, almost quarrelsome sometimes.

"I wish you would do this letter over again," she often said tartly. "I don't know, Ellen, but it just seems to me that some of the mistakes you make these days are inexcusable."

On more than one occasion Ellen would have covered her typewriter, got her hat and left for home—too many times these criticisms of Mrs. Benson's were not justified by cold facts.

But Mama was insistent. She had bought almost a hundred dollars' worth of new clothes—on the assurance that Ellen would work several months.

"I had to have them. You don't want me to go around looking like a scarecrow do you, Ellen? Why, I haven't had even a house dress for years that Aunt Ellen hasn't made.

"Aunt Ellen's a good seamstress, I'll say that for her, but don't you suppose that I want something modish and up to date once in a while? And I bought a winter coat, Ellen, the very least you can do is to help me pay for that."

Wearily Ellen agreed. And why not? The lonely days stretched endlessly ahead. As well work just as long as she could. After all, Mama hadn't had very many pretty clothes in her life. Ellen was glad she could give her a few.

Mike Didn't Object.

And Mike no longer objected to her working. In fact, Mike no longer objected to anything she decided to do. The coming of the baby, far from lessening the breach between them, had only widened it.

Mary Dale worried about it. "Ellen looks like a ghost, John," she told her husband. "I don't think she ought to work. I think I ought to go over, John, and have a good motherly talk with them both. Mike can take care of his own family. Ellen ought to stay at home. She owes it to herself and to the baby."

But Dr. Dale shook his head. "Don't, Mary. Let the youngsters alone. They've got to work out this thing for themselves. We can't help them."

Unhappy Mentally.

"But Ellen isn't able to work, John. You know yourself how frail Ellen looks——"

"Nonsense, Mary, she's a young, strong girl. She'll go through with this all right. Everything's O. K. Ellen's not happy mentally—that's what's wrong."

"I know she isn't happy," Mary worried. "Michael isn't happy, either. I can tell it. And yet I don't know what to say. In fact, I don't dare say anything—for fear I might say the wrong thing."

"Good girl," patting her hand, "sometimes, fathers and mothers, in their anxiety to make things right, say and do things that only make them worse.

"Ellen's a fine young woman and she's got good sense. She loves Michael. And Michael's a smart boy. If he hasn't good judgment it isn't because we didn't try to rear him and teach him to be reasonable.

"But it's out of our hands now. They've got to work this thing out for themselves. We're out of the picture, Mary."

And so the slow days passed—seemingly endless.

What Today Means

"Taurus."

IF MAY 18 is your birthday, the best hours for you on this date are from 10:15 a. m. to 12:15 p. m., from 2:15 to 4:15 p. m., and from 7:15 to 9:15 p. m. The danger periods are from 8:15 to 10:15 a. m., from 4:15 to 6:15 p. m. and from 9:15 to 11:15 p. m.

Moral suasion will accomplish far more today than physical force. The loss of temper is likely to lead to the disarrangement of carefully laid plans, so should be avoided. Boisterous conversation or laughter in public places will be offensive and is likely to be resented. Today should be an auspicious one for pleasure seekers, providing good taste is used in the selection of their medium of entertainment. Friends may be responsible for your being agreeably surprised. The old saying that "money has wings" may be true in so far as you are concerned, as it would seem some of it will soon be flying in your direction.

Today is conducive for unintentional errors occurring. The wise man and woman will count their change. Married and engaged couples, as well as those in the midst of courtships, will be well rewarded if they make up their minds to be good humored. Should things not turn out the way you expected them to, it will pay to be a good sport and smile.

If a woman and May 18 is your birthday, you may have every right to breathe a sigh of relief, for the indications are the next 12 months will have much more in the way of happiness to offer than those just passed. Let new hopes inspire ambitious dreams for your future success. There is a likelihood that your opinion will be requested on an important subject. Weigh carefully what you have to say, as a hasty expression of your thoughts on the topic may later on be subjected to reversal.

You should be able to do artistic, as well as profitable work, with the needle or paint brush, and probably have a talent for decorating, window dressing, as well as selling. Your home, especially if you have a husband and children, should be a safe haven, reflecting love, as well as contentment.

The child born on May 18, as soon as it passes the age of infancy, must be taught the importance of being both considerate and unselfish.

If a man and May 18 is your natal day, avoid being ultra conservative or indecisive in business matters. Your business success may depend on your being progressive and wide-awake. Law, medicine, politics, geology, mineralogy, engineering, as well as theology are among the activities in which you may successfully engage.

The Washington Post

Nice Signs 300 Bills, Vetoes 75, Including Oath for Teachers

Most Legislation Local in Nature

Chesapeake Bay Bridge Authority Is Among Measures Initiated.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Annapolis, Md., May 17.—Gov. Harry W. Nice today signed into law more than 300 proposals passed by the recent session of the General Assembly and vetoed 75 others. He was joined for the bill signing procedure by President Lansdale G. Sasscer, of the Senate, and Speaker Emanuel Gorgine, of the House. In three or four instances bills were held up for further consideration.

Outstanding among the measures that went the veto route was the now famous "teacher's oath bill," that would have required instructors in all State-aided institutions to take the oath of allegiance to the United States, one of the most controversial issues before the Legislature. He had previously indicated his intention to veto this bill because of the manner in which it was drawn. He declared it a "futile gesture" at accomplishing loyalty.

Another important measure disapproved was the race track legislation, designed to give tax relief to the several major tracks in the State. This bill was sponsored by Delegate Kent R. Mulliken, Prince Georges County, Democratic floor leader of the House, who made a bitter fight for its passage. Prime features of the bill were reduction of the tax on tracks from $6,000 to $1,000 per day, and increasing the tax on bets from 1 to 2½ per cent.

Approves Bridge Authority.

As heretofore indicated, the Governor approved the bill to set up an authority for the construction of a bridge across Chesapeake Bay, with the understanding that he would have the appointment of the three members of the bridge commission to supplant those named in the bill, and also eliminate the proposal for the State to buy the Eastern Shore ferries.

A third veto of importance was that of the "claw machine" bill, a measure designed to remove the license fee from claw machines and similar contraptions in public places.

Several Montgomery County bills were vetoed. Topping the list was the measure to abolish the county liquor board. Others vetoed included:

Reducing the salary of the county commissioner detailed as superintendent of county farm property; reducing the compensation of the county board of assessment; authorizing the county commissioners to levy a tax for the Silver Spring Public library; placing employes of the county health department under the merit system; amending the law for widening the Rockville-Georgetown pike within the county area; making it unlawful for persons under 18 years to discharge firearms; providing that the board of education appoint the supervisor of school property; reducing the salary of the county commissioner designated as supervisor of the police force; providing that the Governor appoint a successor to the county treasurer in event of death, removal, etc., on recommendation of the central committee of the party to which the official belonged.

Among legislation for Montgomery County approved were several amending and enlarging the provisions of the Maryland-Washington Metropolitan District act. All were introduced by Senator Stedman Prescott. They increase the area of metropolitan district, extend the operation and effect of the building code, relate to county building inspection and regulate issuance of certain licenses or permits in residential zones.

The large majority of bills to receive Executive approval were laws affecting the several counties and Baltimore City, although there were a number of State-wide significance.

Along with his approval of the Bay Bridge bill, the Governor signed another measure that extends to two years the time for starting work on the structure.

Included in the bills approved was one giving the insurance commissioner power to suspend and revoke licenses issued to brokers and agents, and several measures amending the workmen's compensation law.

Engineering Office Created.

Some of the State-wide measures approved are:

Creating a State department of building engineering.

Amending the law relating to building and homestead associations, regulating the investment of funds and enabling associations to avail themselves of full benefits of the national housing act.

Amending the inheritance law.

Relating to filing claims under workmen's compensation law.

Referendum of a constitutional amendment to permit lotteries, or sweepstakes.

Fixing the penalty for violation of the undertakers' law.

Changing the penalty for kidnaping from a maximum of 20 years in prison to 30 years or hanging in the court's discretion.

Fixing license fees for employment agencies

Limiting the compensation to employes of the insurance department.

Authorizing use of school buildings for meetings of Farmers Education and Co-operative Union of America.

Reducing the fine for parking without lights.

Changing the names of the State Normal Schools at Towson, Salisbury and Frostburg to State Teachers Training Schools.

Teachers' Pay Cuts Remain.

Continuing the reduction of pay of public school teachers and authorizing the board of public works to restore part of the pay at its discretion.

Exempting tolls on the proposed Wakefield Memorial Bridge from the gross receipts tax.

Referendum on a constitutional amendment authorizing the Governor to fill vacancies in the Senate and House of Delegates.

Fixing the maximum penalty for criminal assault to life imprisonment instead of 21 years.

Making imprisonment in either the House of Correction or jail the penalty for desertion.

Fair Trade Bill Signed.

The Governor finally decided to approve the fair trade bill, although he previously announced he would defer action because he felt it was akin to the NRA bill before Congress and thought it best to await until Congress acted. This bill was sponsored by Speaker Gorfine of the House at the instance of retail grocery dealers. Its intent is to restrict chain stores from cutting the prices of nationally advertised products below a profitable basis for independent dealers. It is optional with manufacturers, but will permit those so inclined to stamp the retail prices on their products and will lend State authority to enforce the selling price.

Most of the bills vetoed were duplicates of local laws for the counties—that is, companion measures having been passed by both Senate and House.

Horses Lean on Wires, Causing Short Circuit

Hagerstown, Md., May 17.—For three days the Keedysville, Sharpsburg and Boonsboro areas had been plagued with interruptions in power service.

But yesterday a lineman happened to discover the cause. Several horses were rubbing against guy wires with such force as to sway the poles, causing power lines to swing together with the resultant short circuit.

College Park Attack on Administration Is Probed.

Announcement Expected Soon on Findings of Board.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 17.—The administration of the University of Maryland was subjected to a close scrutiny by the board of regents of the school today, but its executive session was adjourned without any announcement as to the findings.

The investigation was undertaken by the board after charges had been made at College Park, seat of the undergraduate schools, that the standing of the university and its faculty had been lowered under the present administration. The board sat as a committee of the whole to consider the charges.

It was understood that a decision will be announced as soon as certain studies have been completed. The meeting was the regular monthly session of the board of regents.

Sitting as the State Board of Agriculture, the board today selected the names of 12 persons to be submitted to Gov. Nice, from which the Governor will appoint three members as the Maryland Milk Control Commission.

The law creating the commission was passed at the last session of the Legislature. Those named today were:

Republicans — David G. Harry, Homer G. Remsburg, C. Wilbur Miller, Harry A. Matthews, Harry F. Klinefelter and Lawrence Woodin.

Democrats—A. M. Knapp, Howard Warfield, John Clark, John M. Dennis, jr.; W. D. Atehurst and A. Raymond Marvel.

The board also approved a plan for reorganization of the State live stock administration. Under this plan a State veterinarian will be placed in charge, under the supervision of the board, of the State live stock sanitary laws and regulations. The State veterinarian will give his full time to the work. He will cooperate with Federal officials who supervise the application of Federal funds for the control of animal diseases.

Virginia Police Hit as Gaming Inquiry Opens

Special Grand Jury Begins Numbers, Racing Quiz at Fredericksburg.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Fredericksburg, Va., May 17.—The special grand jury investigating gambling here in the form of "numbers" and racing bets adjourned late today until Tuesday, after examining most of 36 witnesses summoned. It was learned that numerous other witnesses will be summoned before next Tuesday, including several women.

The sudden and sweeping inquiry was launched today by Judge Frederick W. Coleman when he summoned a special grand jury in Corporation Court and charged the body to make a thorough and complete investigation of the condition which he described as "notorious."

In charging the grand jury Judge Coleman said, "I am shocked that this condition should exist in this city, which prides itself on the high standard of its public morals. I do not know whether the police of Fredericksburg are blind, dumb or dead, but I do know they have been asleep if not dead. Where the police have been all this time heaven only knows."

Judge Coleman said it was not intended to indict those who play the "numbers" game or bet on the the races but to reach the "big shots," those who operate the racket and take racing bets.

Witness Tells Death Plot at Liquor Trial

Former D. C. Man Says $1,000 Was Offered to Kill Him.

Christie Claims Fees Whisky Ring Paid Prosecutor.

By the Associated Press.

Roanoke, Va., May 17.—The ominous words "bumped off" rang in the Federal district courtroom as the 142d Government witness in the trial of alleged Franklin liquor conspirators left the stand this afternoon.

Grilled by defense lawyers, W. A. Christie, former Washington real estate broker, spent six hours testifying and then was not excused, but he left the room denying that he tried to get his brother-in-law, Stafford MacMillan, of Franklin County, to "testify falsely" against C. C. Lee, indicted Commonwealth's attorney.

"No, sir, I didn't try to get him to do anything," Christie said.

$1,000 Offered.

He said MacMillan told him in April that "some party would give $1,000 to get him bumped off."

A 143d witness, E. Frank Dotson, a State prohibition inspector from Wilson's Administration until the abolition of the department in November, 1934, and now a Galax, Grayson County, officer, appeared before the fourth week of the trial ended. The Government will continue its attempt to pile up the evidence Monday.

Dotson said he traveled more than 50 miles from his station at Galax in 1933 to "cut up" 39 stills in the Endicott region of Franklin—"a stone's throw from the public road, or right out in the middle of the field."

Accuses Lee.

Christie, the first witness to swear he paid Lee "protective" money, is to remain here subject to recall, it was understood. A deputy marshal guarded him last night.

Answering back defense attorneys more than once, the Georgia native declared this afternoon that "if the Government wants to indict me, I'll take my medicine with the rest of them," adding, "I think the ring should be broken up." He said that Mrs. MacMillan, his mother-in-law, and Stafford MacMillan had seen him "pay" Will Wray, indicted deputy sheriff.

Freeman, Bishop of Washington, will preach the sermon. Music will be furnished by the United States Marine Band, directed by Capt. Taylor Branson.

Canon Raymond L. Wolven will be master of ceremonies. Other clergy taking part in the service will include Col. Alva J. Brasted, chief of chaplains, United States Army; the Rev. Arlington A. Portsmouth, Va., May 17.—Social security and Virginia's mining conditions will be leading topics of the fortieth annual convention of the Virginia Federation of Labor here Monday and Tuesday.

Federation leaders here said today they anticipated action on resolutions indorsing virtually all of the social security program now before Congress, and urging that Virginia take steps immediately to provide old-age pensions, unemployment insurance and other security features in the State.

With indications that the attendance will exceed 200 delegates, those preparing for the convention said the number of delegates has been swelled by 20 representing southwest Virginia miners, who have expressed particular interest in the federation's recent moves for changes in mine laws, especially with reference to rock dusting.

Action is anticipated on resolutions boosting the Wagner labor bill, and the federation is interested also in shortening the working day for women, minimum wage provisions, and a State law allowing the Department of Labor to act as an agency for collecting back wages.

The executive board of the federation will hold its first executive session Sunday afternoon preliminary to the formal opening of the convention Monday.

Schoolboy's Lesson Is Key to Arrest of 4

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 17.—A half-page of a schoolboy's lesson led to the apprehension of four youths today in connection with a series of minor grocery store robberies during the past two weeks.

Patrolman Robert Campbell, investigating the cases, found the slip on which was written the number of a school. There teachers recognized the handwriting of William Baker, 15, who was taken to the Northern Police Station.

His questioning led to the arrest of James Green, 16, Thurston Lipton, 15, and a third who was later released. The boys were placed in custody of their parents to await hearing at the Juvenile Court tomorrow. The thefts totaled about $35, police said.

Judge Cuts Term Defendant Asked

Murder Sentence Reduced From 50 to 18 Years.

By the Associated Press.

Lynchburg, Va., May 17.—On the advice of his counsel, Frank Morgan, colored, was ready to take 32 years more in the penitentiary than the judge gave him.

Charged with causing the death of another colored person in a dance at Winfall, Va., on April 20, Morgan yesterday proposed to the court through his attorney, R. I. Overbey, of Rustburg, that he be given 50 years for murder in the first degree.

The proposition was approved by Commonwealth's Attorney Sam C. Stowers and accepted by Judge Don Halsey.

But after his case had been disposed of, evidence offered in the trial of McKinley Cardwell, colored, accused of aiding in the slaying, convinced Judge Halsey that the Morgan "compromise" was too severe. So, the court withdrew the original charge, changed it to second degree murder and substituted the 18-year term for the 50. Cardwell was acquitted.

Birth Control Views Clarified By Churchmen

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 17.—Officials of the Episcopal Church pointed out here today that the resolution adopted by the diocesan council yesterday at Fredericksburg, urging Congress to "consider carefully" the bill before it to legalize dissemination of birth-control information through the mails, would limit propagation of such information to "licensed physicians, hospitals and medical clinics."

It was also pointed out that a resolution presented by the Rev. Beverly D. Tucker, rector of St. Paul's, Richmond, was designed to substitute for the present church law permitting vestries to fix the missionary quotas for their parishes, the former law vesting that authority in the diocesan missionary society. The resolution was referred to the executive committee.

Deputies elected to attend the provincial synod of the Province of Washington, embracing Pennsylvania, Delaware, Maryland, Virginia, West Virginia and the District of Columbia, were announced today as:

Clerical deputies: The Rev. Robert B. Nelson, Winchester; R. Cary Montague, D. D., Richmond; Herbert S. Osburn, D. D., Gloucester, and the Rev. B. D. Chambers, Westover.

Lay deputies: W. W. Beverley, Richmond; James M. Lewis, Tappahannock; Blake T. Newton, Westmoreland County, and Walter W. Chamberlin, Leesburg.

45 Millions Works Relief Cash Waited

Maryland Will Award Contracts When U. S. Allots Money.

Thousands to Get Jobs on Projects; Bay Bridge on List.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 17.—Contracts involving between $45,000,000 and $50,000,000 can be let as soon as Maryland's share of the Federal work-relief program is made available, it was estimated today.

Other projects, tentatively approved, could be started three months later as more funds were alloted, State officials said.

It was estimated thousands of men would be given immediate employment on the projects approved.

The undertakings for which contracts could be let as soon as funds are available include:

Baltimore City projects, $16,000,000.

Chesapeake and Delaware Canal, $5,100,000.

State roads program, $4,700,000.

Chesapeake Bay bridge, $10,000,000.

Harbor, $1,000,000.

Savage River dam (Garrett County), $1,250,000.

Baltimore slum clearance, $5,000,000.

Virginia to Allot U. S. Road Funds

By the Associated Press.

Richmond, Va., May 17 (AP).—As soon as Federal regulations regarding their disbursement are received, the highway department will consider the allocation of $7,426,954 of Federal work relief funds for road construction and grade crossing elimination, Highway Commissioner Henry G. Shirley said today.

Already much preparatory work has been done, the roads chief said, particularly in the case of grade-crossing elimination.

CCC Camps Fought By Game Warden

Mosquito War Would Kill Food Plants, He Says.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 17.—Opposition to establishment of two CCC camps in Worcester County for mosquito control was expressed today by State Game Warden E. Lee Lecompte on grounds the projects would be harmful.

Lecompte said he would go to Washington Monday to ask Senator George L. Radcliffe to seek cancellation of plans for the camps.

The game warden said he would be accompanied by Dr. Thomas B. Cullen, chairman of the Chesapeake Bay Authority; Seth Gordon, president of the American Game Association, and Clarence Cottam, food investigator of the United States Biological Survey.

Lecompte contended draining marshes would do little to control mosquitoes but "will kill the aquatic plants on which ducks, other birds and muskrats feed."

Hit-Run, Intoxication Charged to Autoist

Waynesboro, Va., May 17 (AP).—Lavell Lunsford, 28, of Lyndhurst, appeared before Justice W. Terrell Sheehan twice today on charges of driving while drunk and hit-and-run driving.

Lunsford was bound over to the Augusta County grand jury under $1,500 bond on a hit-and-run charge. It was alleged his car injured Clarence Roberts and Miss Elizabeth Bradley just west of the Waynesboro City limits, March 2. At the second hearing, on the drunken driving count, Lunsford was fined $100.

We Shall Be Happy to Sell You a Few Tickets to the Sunday N. V. A. Benefit

Gala Occasion Planned for a Noble Charity

By Nelson B. Bell.

For the benefit of those who have not as yet purchased their tickets for the N. V. A. benefit performance to be given in the Earle Theater tomorrow night at 11:30 by the clock, it seems the advantageous thing to state that pasteboards for this notable event may be obtained at any or all of the following theaters: Earle, Metropolitan, Loew's Fox, Palace, Columbia, RKO-Keith's, Gayety, Tivoli, Ambassador and Central.

A full 2½-hour entertainment will be presented, headlined by the complete stage shows from the Earle and Loew's Fox theaters, entertainers from the Howard and various night clubs, including that golden-voiced soprano, Ethel Pastor, from the Troika, and acts from the Century Theater in Baltimore.

This benefit performance is to be presented as a substitute for the former annoying practice of "passing the hat" at every performance for a week in every theater in town to raise funds for a charity that is no less worthy than Daniel Frohman's Actors' Fund of America.

Obviates Former Practice.

By this device and the further contribution of 10 per cent of receipts of every theater in the Capital on Monday, May 20, to the National Vaudeville Artists' fund, the theatergoing public will be relieved of a repetitious form of solicitation that in former years not only held up the screen and stage bills in all of Washington's motion picture theaters, but also imposed a sort of mental hazard on those who had contributed once, but could not do so every time they stepped into a theater during an N. V. A. week.

The price of tomorrow night's benefit bill is scaled at the ridiculously low figure of $1—ridiculously low, I say, because for the volume and merit of the bill to be enjoyed by those who attend, the price of $1 is one of the most generous bargains in the annals of the local theater. And it is for a cause that deserves wholehearted support.

Come One, Come All.

In addition to the theaters hereinabove listed, a few tickets repose on this desk for disposal at the regular price of $1. First come, first served. I haven't very many, but probably can get more.

The line does not form at the right or anywhere else. Just barge right up and lay the money on the line!

The Wilson Line steamer City of Washington will sail from the Seventh street wharf tonight at 8:30 o'clock, for the first moonlight trip of the 1935 season—provided there is a moon. It will sail anyway, but you know what I mean. The veteran skipper, John Emering, again will command this popular excursion steamer. Stephen Le Sieur and his orchestra will be featured on all of the City of Washington's moonlight sails and perfect audibility of the dance tunes is insured by the installation of new loudspeaker outlets on the dance deck. In conformity with Wilson Line tradition, neither beer nor liquor will be served on the City of Washington.

Concerning Color.

A distinctly divergent point of view seems to be springing up among the better productional minds of Hollywood as to the value of natural color on the screen.

John Hay ("Jock") Whitney, patron saint of the producing interests that are making "Becky Sharp"—the audible film version of Thackeray's "Vanity Fair"—is indulging an expensive whim by making the film entirely in natural color, which still costs a great deal more than the conventional black and white celluloids.

Max Reinhardt, on the other hand, has decided that natural color sequences can serve no more valuable purpose than to disrupt the cumulatively impressive mental reactions he wishes to create in his first attempt to prove himself as completely the master of gelatin as he is of the material resources of the living stage. So he has ordered the deletion of such color footages as were originally made for the cinematographic glorification of Master Will Shakespeare's "A Midsummer Night's Dream."

Here is a pretty problem, indeed. Two astute and perceptive advocates of shadow drama entertain ideas as to color that are diametrically and irreconcilably opposed.

It has always seemed to this column that any development along the line of pictorial expansion was to be welcomed, rather than condemned, by the makers of films. I mean to say that any new scientific quirk that may be said to increase the scope of the cinema's appeal is well worth going after.

It is the function of both the stage and the screen to depict life in as close a semblance of its actuality as may be made possible by the technical and mechanical developments of these opposing branches of the theater.

When sound came along to the screen, it made the motion picture a subject to be apprehended by two of the senses—hearing as well as sight—and that, it seems to me, was a vast step forward in the cultivation of a medium of entertainment that should not be limited to the operation of a single sense.

The perfection of color processes, similarly, has seemed to me to be something to be applauded. It brings the screen one step nearer to that complete realism that is its aim and aspiration.

We do not look upon the world through eyes that see only blacks, whites and grays. The grass is green, the skies are blue, the flowers are red, yellow, purple and whatnot. There should be something of this in the camera's attempt to depict life and the business of living it as it really is.

So, I must take sides against Prof. Reinhardt and clap a hand for Mr. Whitney and his admirable intention to make "Becky Sharpe" a treat of visual as well as intellectual and crisply humorous realism.

Color, I make so bold as to predict, will precede television as an active factor in public diversion. Gray pictures will be obsolete sooner than you think.

Girl Reserves from the five Washington high schools are participating in the production of Constance Wilcox's "Told in a Chinese Garden," as a feature of the spring program to be presented in the Y. W. C. A. Barker Hall tonight and tomorrow night at 8:15 o'clock. Doris Gamble, of McKinley High, will play the leading role of the little Chinese girl, Li-Ti, with Betty Craig, of Roosevelt, opposite in the part of Tai-La, the gardener. The supporting cast will include Doris Kirby, Betty Skipton, Ruth Linthicum, Dorothy Barr, Phoebe Jane Beall, Alice Lewis, Mildred Thompson, Virginia Brown, Emma Boss, Ruth Stewart and Gyneth Eagleson. The play is under the direction of Alice Sigworth Morse.

Miss Lewis' Latest.

Robert M. Miller and Helen Mead will head the cast of the Columbia Players' production of "Where Masks Are Worn," to be presented in Pierce Hall, Fifteenth and Harvard streets, on June 5 and 6.

The play will be presented on these dates for the first time on any stage. It is the latest work of Dorothea J. Lewis, a member of the reviewing staff of this department.

Miss Lewis—"Dot" to you, and you, and you—who for several years has been active in local amateur circles as actress and director, as well as playwright, will herself direct "Where Masks Are Worn," with Bess Dyer as assistant director and stage manager. Jane Lasater Rubey has designed the settings.

There is a pretty elegant week of screen entertainment practically staring you in the face, beginning today. What with Paul Muni in "Black Fury," at the Earle; Richard Arlen, Virginia Bruce and their associates in "Let 'Em Have It," at RKO-Keith's; Shirley Temple in "Our Little Girl," at Loew's Fox; "Les Miserables" holding over at the Palace and "Naughty Marietta" resuming its F street popularity at the Columbia, just what more could you ask? And, besides all that, down at the Met they will give you Gene Stratton Porter's best seller, "Laddie," with John Beal, Gloria Stuart and a precocious young actress whose photographic likeness you will find elsewhere on this page.

Honoring Mr. Ringling.

Mr. Melvin D. Hildreth, celebrated on these pages from time to time as a prominent Washington attorney and walking encyclopedia of facts, fiction and legendary lore of the circus, on Sunday night at 8, in the Mayflower, will entertain a group of friends to meet John Ringling, sole survivor of the large family of brothers that fostered that stupendous combination of the Ringling Brothers and Barnum and Bailey circuses that will arrive in town on Sunday and show both afternoon and night on both Monday and Tuesday.

This column has frequently been the beneficiary of Mr. Hildreth's wide knowledge of the history and picturesque legend of the circus. In the sphere of the tent show it looks to him as the court of last resort.

It will be a pleasure to be among those gathered in compliment to Mr. Ringling on Sabbath evening.

Good Samaritan Note.

I shall make it a point to put in a good word for that eminent publicist, Mr. Frank Braden, who perches midgets on the knees of the J. P. Morgans, in off moments.

And I am not at all sure that this will do me any good whatsoever with Mr. Morgan!

A Newcomer and an Ace Veteran

56 Enter Bee Today to Pick Area Champion

Fifty-six boys and girls from Maryland and Virginia schools will step onto the stage of the New National Museum in Washington this morning eager to exhibit their prowess in spelling, each of them filled with the determination to win the championship of the area. They will compete for prizes offered by The Washington Post, local sponsor of the National Spelling Bee, and the honor of representing this area in the national contest, also to be held in Washington on May 28.

Leonard Thompson, of St. Joseph's school at Morganza, Md., yesterday wrote the spelling bee director: "I have studied the words every day and would like very much to represent this area in the National Bee, but if I am not successful, I shall be glad to have had this experience." That is typical of the spirit displayed by other contestants.

Each boy and girl in today's match already has received a book, offered by The Post to the first and second best speller in every county taking part. Today the prizes will be a 12-volume set of the Encyclopaedia Britannic Junior and a four-volume Champlin's Young Folks Cyclopaedia, awarded by The Post.

In addition, the champion of this match will compete in the National Spelling Bee for $1,750 in cash. First prize in the national contest will be $500; second, $300, and the remaining awards are graded so that each speller taking part will receive at least $50.

The boy or girl who is fortunate enough to win the privilege of taking part in the national bee, also will be entertained at a round of festivities in honor of the champions from every part of the country. Full details of this program will be announced later in The Post.

This Giddy World.

Dear Ed: You are no doubt familiar with the ordinary chain letter, which requests you to forward a dime to one other person. I have changed the rules. Under separate cover you will find one (1) adagio dancer. We used him on our last program as a sound effect. He made a noise like mice, and did it very well. He is 27 years old, 5 feet 10 inches when he's not leaping, and he is house broken. If you wish to keep him, send something equally valuable to three friends. Sincerely, JACK BENNY.

Dear Max Baer: Have been trying to dope out what I could send you in a chain letter, and finally succeeded. Here is a machine gun. By standing in front of the barrel, and pressing a trigger, you'll get the surprise of your life. Understand that you were shot last time while rehearsing a radio script. I don't blame the sponsor at all. I heard that program. It wounded me worse than he wounded you. Better aim next time. Sincerely, E. S.

Dear Peggy Joyce: Inclosed you will find one slightly stale master of ceremonies. I won him last night in a card game at the Friars Club. He has not been working for the last three years, but if you can give him some home relief and a bottle of champagne, you'll find him appreciative. He's really valuable. You could sell some of his gags as genuine antiques. Let him sleep in the blue room as he is very sensitive to colors. Sincerely, E. S.

Dear Huey Long: Sending you, under separate cover, three former Broadway columnists who will share your wealth, starting immediately. When I explained your idea to them, they thought I was joking, but I finally convinced them that you were on the level. I don't know how much you're worth, Huey, but whatever shares you give these kids will be okay. I am sending you with them, an autographed picture of Jim Farley.

Sincerely, E. S.

Observations: Georgie Jessel and Eddie Cantor are feuding, but Jessel has plenty class . . . He pushed his way through a jammed night club to congratulate Mrs. Cantor on her birthday . . . The spaghetti at Leone's is very tasty . . . I like that show girl's name in the Paradise line: Early Dawn . . . That's when she quits work, too . . . That was Mayor LaGuardia at the Mae West flicker last night with License Commissioner Moss . . . Tearing down of the Rialto would have amazed Oscar Hammerstein, for there it was that he erected famous Hammerstein's Victoria Theater . . . Here he presented 17-act vaudeville bills, each one liberally sprinkled with the freaks of Page 1. . . . When wealthy W. E. D. Stokes was shot at the Ansonia Hotel, Hammerstein booked the sisters who shot him . . . His bills included talking dogs, marathon runners, would-be murderesses with enough real professionals to insure his patrons a run for their money . . . There is no modern theater to compare with the Victoria . . . Vaudeville on a P. T. Barnum scale has vanished from the land . . . The only freak attractions now are Broadway columnists.

Most impressive of all the musicians in Erno Rapee's huge Radio City orchestra, to me at least, is the cymbal-clasher. We have never met, yet I feel a real interest in his unique career, because week after week, I've sat in the semidarkness of the loges and rooted for him—to make a mistake. That is not a malicious hope, you understand, simply an esthetic curiosity as to what the leader would do if the cymbal-clasher should clash them at the wrong moment. Would the leader whip out a revolver and shoot him dead? Would the entire orchestra drop hastily from view, unable to face the audience? Would the cymbal-clasher hide sulkily behind the drums which he bangs in his spare moments when he is not clashing his cymbals? I'll never find out, because this unknown person will probably never make a mistake. I can tell from the way he warms up, just before it's time for him to go into action, that he does very good work. He spreads his arms away from his body to get streamline action, he looks piercingly at the leader, and then with the swiftness of the wind, he scrapes his cymbals, and the place is filled with sound. I have seen him, when in mood, clash his cymbals, put them down hastily, give the big drum a terrific wallop and get back to his cymbals in time to catch the downbeat of the same measure. Sometimes, it has seemed to me that the leader has tried to outfox him by going faster, but there's no sense trying to outfox this Magnificent Unknown. He represents the Art of Cymbal Clashing at its very peak. I'll bet nobody ever calls him "Topts."

Whoever is responsible for the new Paradise night club show can step up and take a bow. It is grand entertainment, gauged by night club standards, fast energetic, imaginative. Georgie Hale, just returned from the Coast, is the person who constructed the chorus dance numbers. His minstrel chorus brought the first-nighters to sharp attention, and the magic number, in which each of seven show girls does a separate trick, in tempo, is something to excite a jaded night-club-goer-into-er. I recommend an immediate visit.

Woman Questioned In Death Inquiry

Anne Arundel Seeks More Facts on Suicide Report.

By the Associated Press.

Annapolis, Md., May 17.—More of the details surrounding the death of William F. Braunn, said to have shot himself through the heart at the home of Mrs. Bertha Bell, at Odenton today, were sought by Anne Arundel County officers.

Sheriff Joseph W. Alton headed the investigation. After questioning Mrs. Bell he detained her without charges pending the inquest before Police Magistrate Paul Ford, acting coroner, at Odenton.

The sheriff quoted Mrs. Bell as saying that after she and Braunn, who formerly lived at the Georgetown Democratic Club on the Washington boulevard, had "some words" early today, he threatened to shoot himself. She told him, she was quoted as saying, "you're crazy." A little later, she recounted, she heard a shot in a nearby room and rushed out to see Braunn stagger and fall to the floor.

This Morning . . .

With Shirley Povich

Mr. George Herman Ruth,
Care Boston Braves,
St. Louis, Mo.
Dear Babe:

You were a great guy when you had it, Babe, and I don't blame you for being peeved about what some of the boys have been writing now that you're definitely on the sunset side. But I was thinking, Babe, that you could save yourself a lot of grief by taking the easy way out. It would be honorable, too.

POVICH.

They'll never forget who you are or what you did, Babe. They can't take that away from you. You gave 'em a headline for almost every birth in China, and in or out of uniform, you'll still be a headliner. That's what I'm driving at, Babe. You don't have to go along, staying in that Braves' line-up until they tear the uniform off you. You've made your pile and I understand that you still have considerable of that $840,000 you drew down in salaries in 14 years with the Yanks.

But it ain't the money that I'm talking about, Babe. It's just an old-fashioned idealism, I guess. Anyway, Babe, I hate to see you out there in right field playing like a doddering old rheumatic, stumbling vainly toward those fly balls you used to catch in your hip pocket. There are some fans who are even booing you, Babe, after all these years, and I can understand how you feel about that.

I don't imagine it sets very well with you, either, Babe, to go along day after day proving mostly a burden to the Braves who need hitting strength, above all other things. Those eight hits you've made in 16 games for 'em this season aren't helping matters much, you know, and it would be too bad to see 'em bench you out of sheer necessity of more hitting.

It's tough, I know, Babe. A few years ago those National League pitchers would have had only one way to pitch to you—pitch and duck—but now it's all around the league that you can't hit a low ball. You always could, I remember that. I remember how you used to golf those low ones over all the fences in the league, but I guess it is kinda tough getting in those low swipes these days.

You don't have to alibi, Babe, which is not saying that you are. Everybody knows that you've had a bad cold since the season started and that you figure to hit as long as you can drag your bat to the plate, but we both know that you don't have so many games left in that physique of yours. You never were kind to it you, know, Babe, and it's inevitable. I mean that there isn't much to strive for, now. That outfit you're with insn't headed anywhere and you couldn't put it over if you were the Babe of 1927. Anyway, unfeeling fans, as I say, are beginning to forget things about you.

Why should you subject yourself to all this grief, Babe? What I'm driving at is that you can take anhonorable way out. Just hang up your glove, take the job they promised you in the front office, and you will still be bowing out gracefully. They can't even say that you didn't give all you had it.

S. L. P.

WHAT I had always regarded as this department's oustanding achievement was the piece I wrote for the paper one midsummer day in 1933 when the Nats were wininng the pennant and Heinie Manush was shooting at George Sisiler's record of hitting safely in 41 consecutive games. No American League pitcher had been able to stop Manush, who had already hit safely in 32, or it might have been 33, consecutive games.

But I stopped him. On that morning I inscribed a highly worshipful piece setting forth the remarkable batting prowess of Mr. Manush in all the literary pinwheels I could muster. As I said, I stopped Manush. On that day he got 0 for 5 as the ball players say.

This all leads up to what I had to say yesterday when I pointed out that the Nats were in a miserable hitting slump and that there was no telling when they would start hitting again, if ever. So, it is no surprise to read this morning that they assaulted three Detroit pitchers for 17 hits. I stopped that slump. As a matter of fact, I made particular mention of the fact that the Nats should go out and buy a shortstop to replace their present .188-hitting article. What happened? Three straight hits by Lyn Lary that boosted his average 32 points before the game was half over.

No charge, Mr. Griffith.

Borries to Be Given Sword, Highest Navy Sports Award

Special Dispatch to The Post.

ANNAPOLIS, Md., May 17.—Midshipman Fred (Buzz) Borries, jr., of Louisville, Ky., recognized as one of the most outstanding athletes ever to represent the Naval Academy, will receive the Navy Athletic Association sword offered annually for personal excellence in athletics, it was announced today by Rear Admiral David F. Seller, superintendent. This is the highest athletic award that may be attained by a Midshipman.

The race for the second highest honor, the Thompson Trophy Cup, for "personal influence in the promotion of athletics," was so close that the award will go jointly to Robert E. (Dusty) Dornin, San Francisco, and William C. (Bill) Clark, Garner, Iowa. All three recipients are members of the graduating class.

Although these awards have been made over a period of 42 years, it will be the first time that the names of two middies have been inscribed on the Thompson Trophy, presented by the late Col. Robert M. Thompson, of New York, who was graduated from the Academy in the class of 1868, but dual presentations of the sword have occurred on two previous occasions.

Borries has starred on football field, basket ball and baseball. For his outstanding performances on the gridiron last fall he was selected All-American half back. He was captain of the basket ball team during last season. He is the only midshipman ever to win five coveted "N-stars" for victories over the rival West Point Cadets in athletics. He plays center field on the baseball team and stands in good stead of running this record to seven in the annual game to be staged at West Point June 1.

3-Run Rally In 7th Nets Margin

Myer's Double Scores Three Mates Before Crowd of 8,000.

Ed Linke Pounded Out; Washington Regains Batting Punch.

By Shirley L. Povich.

THE long-lost batting punch of the Nats, missing for nearly a week, turned up strangely enough yesterday against the pitching of Schoolboy Rowe, ace of the Tigers' staff. It was happily received by the ladies' day gathering of 8,000.

There was still some doubt as to how it would all end as late as the seventh inning when the Nats saw their 7-0 lead evaporate into a tie score as the Tigers bestirred themselves against the pitching of Ed Linke and Leon Pettit to crowd seven runs across the plate.

At this point, however, Buddy Myer, whose error had inspired the terrific uprising of the Tigers, cleared up most of the doubt by clearing bases with a double to right field that provided the Nats with their winning margin of 10-8.

The Nats expelled Schoolboy Rowe from the game during the midst of a four-run offensive in the fourth inning after picking up a run in each of the first three sessions, but Linke, who had been permitting the Tigers only three hits, ran into a mess of trouble in the seventh.

Throw Passes Pettit.

The upshot of it was that Leon Pettit, who relieved Linke with four runs across the plate and two on base, permitted the Tigers to tie the score before he could get 'em out. It was an excusable error by Lyn Lary that provided the Tigers with the two tying runs in a double-play attempt. Pettit, who rushed to first to take Lary's perfect throw, for some reason permitted it to drift up against the right-field boxes while two runners scored, prompting the question as to why he covered the bag in the first place.

Anyway, the Nats bounced back from the effects of Detroit's seven-run inning to win the ball game in their next time at bat by bunching 3 of their 17 hits. Vic Sorrell, the third Detroit pitcher, was the victim of their onslaught.

Joe Kuhel instituted proceedings against Sorrell by slashing a double off Rogell's glove, and went to third when Bolton beat out a bunt that Sorrell refused to field until too late. A walk to Lary filled the bases.

Myer Hits Double.

At this point Manager Bucky Harris refused to remove Leon Pettit for a pinch hitter and the Nats hopes sagged as Pettit struck out, but along came Myer with a terrific drive to right for two bases on the first pitch, and home came Kuhel, Bolton and Lary with the winning runs.

The Tigers got a run back in the eighth when Pettit walked Gehringer at the start and they had the tying runs on base again before he pitched himself out of a hole. With an easy force-play on Greenberg's grounder into the box in sight, Pettit heaved the ball to center field, Gehringer went to third, and Greenberg to first. Here, Pettit dis-

Reds Triumph, 6-3; Two Giants Hurt

Moore, Bartell Injured; Parmelee Drops First.

By the Associated Press.

Cincinnati, May 17.—The Reds gave the New York Giants a thumping today as they returned to their home grounds, 6 to 3. In addition to the defeat, which left them in a virtual tie with Brooklyn, but still in first place on the percentages, the Giants lost the services of Joe Moore and Dick Bartell through injuries and Roy Parmelee suffered his first pitching loss of the season.

Moore was struck on the right wrist on an unusual mishap in the third inning and it was feared he might have suffered a fracture. While he was waiting his turn at bat a foul off Parmelee's bat struck him. He was taken to a hospital for examination. Bartell hurt his right ankle crashing into Ernie Lombardi at the plate in the sixth and limped off after finishing out the inning.

The Reds jumped on Parmelee in the first inning for three runs and never were threatened as Paul Derringer hurled a steady game for his fourth victory of the season.

Ferrell Bests Sam Jones for Fifth of '35; Aids in Winning Drive.

By the Associated Press.

BOSTON, May 17.—Wes Ferrell topped the 43-year-old Sad Sam Jones in a 13-inning pitching duel today to give the Boston Red Sox a 2-1 victory over the pace-setting Chicago White Sox before a crowd of 9,400 that assembled to welcome the Croninmen after their successful tour.

In gaining his fifth victory of the season, Ferrell held the heavy-hitting visitors to five hits, one a homer by the slugging Zeke Bonura in the ninth, which tied up the score. It was his eighth circuit drive of the season.

Both Ferrell and Jones bore down heavy until the last of the thirteenth which Babe Dahlgren opened with a slashing double down the left-field line. Wes Ferrell dropped a bunt toward third and beat the throw to first as Dahlgren raced to third. After Williams fanned, Luke Appling took Bill Werber's grounder and threw to the plate to head off Dahlgren, who scored the winning run when Luke Sewell dropped the ball.

Chevy Chase Tourney Is Annexed by Greene

By Dave Herman.

HICKMAN GREENE, 22-year-old transplanted Louisianan, who plays golf shots with the same boldness with which Huey Long roasts the New Deal, scored a triumph for Louisiana State University and Manor Club yesterday when the won the historic Chevy Chase invitation tournament.

Playing spectacular golf, the lad who once captained Huey Long's golf team at Baton Rouge, routed 17-year-old Billy Dettweiler, of Congressional, 7 and 6, in a final that was all Greene from the start.

Dettweiler never has been beaten so decisively in his life, and Billy found himself more or less a spectator after they passed the ninth hole, at which time Greene commanded a six-hole lead.

Never before has a Chevy Chase final witnessed such a superlative display of shotmaking as the little Manor ace negotiated the 12 holes of this difficult course in three under par figures. Greene fired with such unerring accuracy that not once did he wander off the fairway, and not once did he meander into a trap.

He didn't have a three-putt green, and his putting blade cut a wide swath on this par 69 course. For the 12 holes, Greene used up only 16 putts. He had eight one-putt greens. He didn't miss but two greens.

Greene didn't go over par on any hole. He had 9 pars and 3 birdies. Dettweiler, obviously off on the first 9 went out in 42 as Greene nipped par by a stroke with his 34.

Billy won only one hole—the 424-yard eleventh, where he planted his second 2 feet from the cup and

Yanks Trounce Indians, 4-2; 3d in Row

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 17.—The Yankees and Johny Allen rang up the third straight victory for each today as they trounced the second-place Cleveland Indians, 4 to 2, but the club went the pitcher one better by making it four in a row over the Cleveland club—two on the road and two here—while Allen garnered only two of those victories.

Allen pitched a six-hit, six-strikeout game, but lost a shutout in the eighth inning when Bozie Berger smashed a home run with Roy Hughes on base. Up to that time the Yankee mound staff had gone 26 innings without allowing a run.

Monte Pearson hurled a good game for the Indians except for four passes, two of which were converted into runs. He granted only seven hits in as many innings and fanned six.

Little Shoots 74 In Britain in Snow

Trails Garnett, His Feared Rival, by 2 Strokes.

By the Associated Press.

St. Anne's-on-the-Sea, Eng., May 17.—America's contingent of Simonpure golfers, headed by Lawson Little, began to look around for dogsleds as an Arctic blizzard raged this morning, blanketing Royal Lytham course, where Little will begin the defense of his British amateur championship Monday, with an inch of snow.

The hardy invaders, however, sallied forth this afternoon for a few practice strokes. Little managed to turn in a sparkling 74 despite "blue" hands and chattering teeth. He was two strokes, however, behind Leslie Garnett, British ace, who is the possible opponent for the American in the semi-final.

King Saxon 2-1 For Belmont Test Today

Discovery Is Rated 3 to 1; Two-Horse Race for $5,000 Foreseen.

By the Associated Press.

NEW YORK, May 17.—King Saxon, a 4-year-old son of Saxon which has risen from the ranks of the platers to that of handicap performer within one year, will receive his most exacting test tomorrow when he challenges Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Discovery and eight other top-notch horses in the forty-second running of the Metropolitan Mile at Belmont Park.

Rated as one of the turf's fastest thoroughbreds since winning 11 of his last 12 starts, The King, owned by C. H. (Pat) Knebelkamp, of Louisville, has been given all the best of the weights. Lightly regarded when the weights were first announced in February, he was assigned only 110 pounds. Since then, however, he has scored galloping victories in the Paumonok and Excelsior handicaps at Jamaica, with the result he will have 118 pounds in the saddle for the $5,000 added test.

Less Than Discovery.

Even at that, he will carry 12 less pounds than Discovery, second ranking 3-year-old of 1934, and two less than W. R. Coe's Ladysman, conqueror of Equipoise in the Suburban last year and second to Azucar in the Santa Anita Handicap. The remainder of the field includes Mrs. John Hay Whitney's Singing Wood, Mrs. Deering Howe's Only One and E. R. Bradley's Bazaar.

The King is expected to rule the choice at 2 to 1, with Discovery, fifth in the 6 furlongs of the Tobogan at the opening of Belmont,

Miss Claytor Takes Post Golf Title

Shoots Birdie 3 on 18th as Climax to Match; Awarded Trophy.

THE WASHINGTON POST TROPHY, emblematic of supremacy in a match play handicap golf championship, yesterday went back to the Chevy Chase Club, where it reposed two years ago.

Miss Louise Claytor took it there by dint of her two-up victory over Mrs. George B. McGinty, of Columbia Country Club, in the 18-hole final of the tournament at Congressional Country Club course. Miss Elizabeth Houghton won it first in 1933.

No woman golfer ever was more deserving of her laurels than the athletic-looking young woman from Chevy Chase who has been a prominent figure in District golf circles for the last six years.

Called Great Sport.

"To a grand golfer and a great sport," was the way Mrs. Eugene Meyer, wife of the publisher of The Post, expressed it in awarding the trophy to Miss Claytor at the luncheon-entertainment given by the Congressional women's committee to climax one of the most interesting tournaments in years.

Mrs. Meyer, guest of honor, paid glowing tribute to Mis Claytor's golfing prowess during the six-day event and her ability to win out after playing 42 holes in a single day.

She was introduced by Mrs. Charles K. King, of Army and Navy Club, president of the District Women's Golf Association, who arose from a sick bed to attend the final and ceremonies. She, in turn, was presented by Mrs. Ralph W. Payne, tournament chairman of Congressional.

Miss Claytor, eight handicap player, had to give Mrs. McGinty nine strokes, and the little Columbia golfer, who has been playing less than three years, put up a brave fight.

Conceded Birdie Three.

A great four iron second shot gave Miss Claytor a par four and win on the sixth, and she went two up by capturing the seventh with a five. Mrs. McGinty rallied, won back the next two holes, the short ninth with a four when Miss Claytor overshot the green with her second, and they went to the turn all even.

In a finish befitting a champion, Miss Claytor hit a beautiful drive, and mashied a second shot that finished eight feet to the right of the pin. Mrs. McGinty, short in two, overshot the green with her third, missed her fourth, and Miss Claytor won the hole with a conceded birdie three.

In four of her matches Miss Claytor gave away 35 strokes.

In the consolations, Mrs. Roland Mackenzie of Congressional last year's champion defeated Mrs. F. G. Awalt of the same club one up. Prizes were presented Mrs. Will Masten of Washington and Mrs. J. J. McCarthy of Congressional, semi-finalists; Mrs. Betty Mackley of Indian Spring, low gross winner; Miss Betty Keeler, unattached, low net winner; Mrs. Mackenzie and Mrs. Awalt.

Vanderbilt's Bachelor Dinner Takes Feature at Rockingham

Colt Defeats Happy Knot Easily

By the Associated Press.

ROCKINGHAM PARK, Salem, N. H., May 17.—The experts were agreed practically unanimously that A. G. Vanderbilt's Bachelor Dinner had no business in the Tribune Claiming Handicap, today's feature race for a purse of $1,500. So the handsome 3-year-old bay colt went out and ran the legs off the 3-2 favorite, Happy Knot, in a 5½-furlong test.

Bachelor Dinner lay well back in the field of six in the early stages of the race. Mrs. J. H. Whitney's Enthusiasm set the pace, with Chinese Empress and Wise Anne on his heels. But the eventual winner started to move at the three-eighths pole and at the head of the stretch was second to Enthusiasm.

The Whitney colt carried him very wide, but Bachelor Dinner straightened out and came roaring down the middle of the home stretch, whereupon Enthusiasm quietly folded up. Happy Knot finished second, three lengths behind the winner, and Hug again was third.

It was the first victory of the year for the Vanderbilt colt, which was regarded as his most promising 2-year-old last year. In his Florida campaign, he managed to show twice, and finished fourth twice, but today under the clever handling of Jockey L. Knapp he reserved his rush until stretch time and won going away.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—TORITA—$11.30, $4.40, $4.00; SHYNO, $4.40, $4.10; ARMFUL, 6.90.

TORITA displayed speed from the start, went to the front when LIGHTWEIGHT began tiring, drew clear before reaching stretch, and was hard ridden to the finish. SHYNO, in close quarters soon after start, fought his way clear and closed in determined fashion. ARMFUL was in the forefront throughout. SPANK, away quickly, lacked speed to keep up, though holding on gamely throughout. PRINCESS ALICE was unable to keep pace after breaking alertly. SANDY MACK, shuffled back slightly at the start, closed some ground when gaining clear sailing, but never could enter into contention. LIGHTWEIGHT tired after showing good early speed.

SECOND RACE—Six furlongs. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 2:55. Off at 2:57. Winner, F. E. Kraft's br. s. Two-dollar mutuels paid—JUDGE SCHILLING, $6.40, $3.90, $2.70; MANTADOS, $6.20, $4.10; PROTRACTOR, $4.30.

JUDGE SCHILLING, away quickly, disposed of STRETCH CALL, withstood a bold bid from MANTADOS before reaching the stretch, drew clear, but was kept under urging to stall off MANTADOS. Latter, reserved early, made his bid in the last three furlongs, moved up during the stretch and closed stoutly. PROTRACTOR, under urging throughout, closed courageously under pressure. AIRLINE, unable to keep pace early, swung to the outside in the stretch and closed with a rush. WEEDIDIT made up some ground after trailing early. STRETCH CALL, much used in racing with the winner in the first three furlongs, tired. DOUGLAS F. went well placed for the first half-mile.

THIRD RACE—Five and one-half furlongs. Purse, $1,000; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from stall gates. Won driving; place, same. Went to post at 3:25. Off at 3:27½. Winner, Mrs. C. DARK WAR, prominently placed from the outset and following in closest pursuit of the pace, moved up on the outside of the pacemaker in stretch to assume a slight lead. Held WEE WINK safely to the end. HIGH HAND II, handled to the rail in the contest in the opening furlong, was unable to draw clear and fought it out courageously. HIGH HAND II was well up throughout and held on willingly in the drive. POCKET, under steady restraint until leaving the back stretch, raced around on the outside, but failed to respond in the drive. GREAT HASTE was never able to enter into contention. SMEAR trailed throughout.

CIVIL WAR, away to his field, shook off JESSIE D. M., drew clear and had enough in reserve to hold MOANE KEALA safe. The latter moved up on the outside midway of the turn and closed ground steadily through the last furlong. Sun Erin, slow to settle into his best stride, came stoutly in the last quarter mile. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BACHELOR DINNER, $9.80, $3.60, $2.60; HAPPY KNOT, $3.20, $2.30; HUG AGAIN, $2.50.

BACHELOR DINNER, rated along under stout restraint in close attendance of the leaders, moved up on the outside, was carried wide at the stretch turn by ENTHUSIASM and drew out as if much the best in the race. ENTHUSIASM, the way, continued with good energy to the end. HUG AGAIN, unable to keep pace early, saved ground in the stretch and closed determinedly under pressure. WISE ANNE, well up, weakened slightly under urging. CHINESE EMPRESS failed to display any of her usual early speed, racing far back.

Two-dollar mutuels paid—PLUMAGE, $12.50, $4.60, $3.20; SALUT D'AMOUR, $3.80, $3.00; BRIGHT BIRD, $3.10.

PLUMAGE, never far from the pace, wore down BRIGHT BIRD when reaching the stretch and drew out steadily through the last furlong. SALUT D'AMOUR followed in pursuit of BRIGHT BIRD while the latter was establishing the pace, responded gamely to pressure, but was unable to keep pace with the winner. BRIGHT BIRD took command at once, was rated well along under steadying restraint, but was not good enough to stave off the bids of the first two. FLAT ROCK never could gain a prominent position. PENNATE was never a factor.

SEVENTH RACE—One mile. Purse, $800; claiming. For 3-year-olds and upward. Start good from gate. Won driving; place same. Went to post at 5:30. Off at 5:30. Winner, J. St. Ruth's b. c. Two-dollar mutuels paid—BLADE EDGE, $10.70, $7.50, $4.30; TEE TOTUM, $9.30, $4.70; BEFITTING, $2.90.

BLADE EDGE, placed under punishment in the opening strides, drew clear in the run to the first turn, was steadied along in front, was again placed under punishment in the stretch and drew out in the last furlong. TEE TOTUM moved up in the stretch and closed fast in the last furlong. TEE TOTUM forced the pace of the winner, made her bid when straightened out for the run to the finish, but was not good enough. BEFITTING, unable to keep up early, closed some ground. CAPPOQUIN passed tiring horses through the last three-sixteenths. CAP PISTOL faltered badly after going the opening furlongs.

By John R. Vosburgh.

FRANKIE BARONI, the roly-poly pitcher of Roosevelt High, fanned 21 Tech batters yesterday—set them back one after the other, swinging desperately at a bewildering assortment of drops, curves and fast balls as he hurled the Ruff Riders to a 5-to-0 victory at Eastern stadium.

The stocky boy, whom his teammates fittingly call "Barrel," pitched his team into second place in the inter-high series to a spot where it now appears the only outfit able to challenge Eastern's sweep toward its second straight title.

Fans Four In Ninth.

As the round-faced right-hander opened the seventh inning by knocking off his 14th strike-out victim, observers began groping for words with which to describe the performance. By the time Pinch-hitter Milt Mullitz went down swinging for the last out, the fourth to fan in the ninth inning, they had reached up and brushed off for use the old stand by "sensational," for it was nothing short of that. It was much more than a mere, brilliant shut-out.

Tech found his offerings for five hits but no two of them came in any one inning. One man got as far as third base, Abe Fillah, whose triple opened the second inning. Then Baroni fanned Snow, Fones and Dellstacious in a row. Nobody got as far as third after that inning. His control was nearly perfect. He had the Techmen swinging on fast balls cutting low across the inside corner, mixing these up with a fast-breaking curve and a tantalizing sinker. He walked one man. A dropped third strike in the ninth gave him a chance to add Mullitz to the list for the fourth strike-out of the frame.

Roudabush Fanned 23.

Despite his remarkable achievement, Baroni did not set an inter-high record. Back in 1923, Bill Roudabush, now a pitcher for the Union Printers, fanned 23 men twirling for Chief Charlie Guyon's Eastern team against Tech. Coach Artie Boyd, of Eastern's track team, was on the losing team.

Baroni collected two of his team's hits, but by that time, Roosevelt had a four-run lead. In the fourth, Frank Bailey had singled, Jack Neely was safe at first on a bad throw by George Hahn, Elwood Ey dumped a single to center and Bailey and Neely, who had advanced on a passed ball, scored. Sherwood Robertson, nephew of Clark Griffith, walked, and Francis Coakley scored Ey on a sharp Texas leaguer between first and second.

Add Fourth Run.

A single by Ed Thompson, a bobble of Bailey's grounder by Third-Baseman Fones and a single by Neely added the fourth run in the fifth and brought Pitcher Specks Elgin's departure from the box. In the seventh, Bailey was hit on the foot by one of Relief Pitcher Bill Liggett's low ones and scored on a squeeze play bunt by Francis Coakley, after Ey's single and a pass to Robertson had filled the sacks.

Virginia Frosh Swamp W. & L. Yearlings, 17-3

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Charlottesville, Va., May 17.—Virginia's freshmen line went on a batting spree today, defeating the first-year team from Washington and Lee, 17 to 3. Edmunds led with the stick, getting four hits, including two doubles. The little Generals were held to three hits.

Fast Chesapeake Club Plays at Alexandria

Special Dispatch to The Post.

West Point, Va., May 17.—Fans of Alexandria and vicinity are going to be treated to some real baseball Sunday afternoon in Alexandria when the strong Chesapeake Club, of West Point, plays the St. Mary's Celtics at Bagett Stadium. Chesapeake, last year's State champions, is one of the strongest clubs ever to step on a semi-pro diamond in Virginia, and this year they are well on the way to duplicate last year's record of 84 wins against 6 losses.

Managed by Bill Gwathmey, the West Pointers walked through every club with the exception of Culpeper, who defeated them twice by close scores last year. Chesapeake has one of the strongest pitching staffs in the State this year—Red Proctor, June Greene and Paul Folliard, all three having had major league experience.

Wake Forest's Nine Beats G. W., 5-1

Colonials Are Held Safe by Gaddy's Pitching; Patton Hits Homer.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

WAKE FOREST, N. C., May 17. George Washington Colonials were repulsed in the initial encounter of their North Carolina invasion here today as Pitcher Johnny Gaddy led Wake Forest's Deacons to victory, 5 to 1.

Tomorrow the Colonials must defeat Elon in order to gain an even split for the trip and to climb above the .500 mark for the season, since today's loss was their fifth against as many triumphs.

Vince DeAngelis, G. W.'s knuckleball flinger, held the Deacon batsmen much better than a week ago when they pounded out a 14-5 victory in Washington, but he couldn't match the hurling of Gaddy. The Colonials garnered only five hits off Gaddy, while 11 of them struck out.

Patton Hits Homer.

"Stretch" Patton's home run to deepest center, scoring Wall ahead of him in the second inning, proved sufficient to win for the home club. DeAngelis held the Deacons hitless and runless for the next four innings and then yielded a run in the seventh and two more in the eighth, Gaddy's screaming double featuring in the latter rally.

George Washington escaped a shutout in the seventh when Catcher Walker singled, advanced on a passed ball and tallied on Center Fielder Webb's single.

Aud, Rockville, Victor, 5 to 1, in Mound Duel

Willie Aud, of Rockville, and Francis Cubitt, of Poolesville, locked in a twirling duel at Rockville yesterday and the former emerged with the victory, 5 to 1, due to four unearned runs scored against Cubitt. Aud allowed but one hit, and Cubitt three.

Rockville scored three times in the first off a lone hit and an overthrow of third. Poolesville failed to hit until the seventh and last inning when, with Cubitt on due to a walk, Arthur Woodward singled, robbing Aud of a no-hit game and shut-out. Rockville clinched fourth place in the series by the victory.

Neugass Breaks Mark In Southeastern Meet

Birmingham, Ala., May 17 (A.P.).—One record was broken and another equaled today as Southeastern Conference athletes ran off preliminary trials in the third annual track and field meet.

Honors for the afternoon went to Herman Neugass, Tulane University's speedster, who cracked the established mark in the 220-yard dash and equaled the conference record in the 100-yard dash. He sped the 220 in 20.9 seconds and ran the 100 in 9.8 seconds.

Duke Has 18 in Track Finals; Terps, 10

Heavy Cinders Cut Times; Widmyer Runs '100' in 10 Seconds.

DUKE STADIUM, Durham, N. C., May 17.—Track and field stars of the ten member schools of the Southern Conference paved the way here today for tomorrow's finals in the circuit's thirteenth annual outdoor championship meet, but a heavy track kept times slow and no records were set.

Coaches predicted a fast track and a number of broken records for tomorrow.

Backers of the favored University of North Carolina team were dubious tonight of the chances of the Tar Heels to repeat as champions after Duke's already dangerous aggregation pushed a surprisingly large number of men through preliminary competition and into the finals.

Nine of the ten schools in the conference qualified men for tomorrow's finals in the 100, 220, 220-low hurdles, 120-high barriers, 440, discus, shotput, broad jump and javelin. South Carolina, tenth member college, has three men entered in other events in which no preliminaries were held.

Duke put 18 men in qualifying places in today's events, compared with 11 Tar Heels, Maryland placed 10, Clemson 8, Virginia 4, V. M. I. 3, Washington and Lee 2, and V. P. I. and N. C. State 1 each.

Widmyer's Time Best.

Earl Widmyer of Maryland marked up the best time in a running event when he took one heat of the century in 10 seconds flat.

The unexpected happened when Gwynne Tayloe of V. M. I. failed to qualify in the 100; when Schuhle of W. and L. missed out in the 120-high barriers and Slye of Maryland in the 220-lows; and as Ford of Clemson failed to place in the 220-dash.

Grover Everett of Virginia came through to lead one heat in the high hurdles in 15.7 seconds and place in the low hurdles and broad jump. North Carolina's pair of hurdlers, Tom Hawthorne and Frank Abernethy, qualified in both high and low events.

Widmyer led heats in the 100 and 220 and other Maryland men looming as threats for first places tomorrow included Evans, Archer or Sonen in the 440 and Bers in the broad jump.

The finals will start at 1:30 tomorrow afternoon.

'Striking' Horsemen Routed at Hagerstown

Special Dispatch to The Post.

Hagerstown, Md., May 17.—Horsemen who yesterday served notice upon Hagerstown Fair Association officials that they would not race their horses during the ten-day meet, beginning next Tuesday here, unless purses were increased from $300 to $400 were today ordered to quit the grounds by Saturday noon.

In the meantime, General Manager Harold F. Bester, after a check among horsemen today, announced that 146 horses now here will remain and race, and that 75 additional horses will be here by Sunday of Monday. These stables had been turned down previously because of lack of space.

Commission Reverses Stand; To Take Canzoneri Bout 'Cut'

THE Boxing Commission reversed a previous ruling by deciding to take its customary 5 per cent of gross gate receipts on the Tony Canzoneri-Frankie Klick bout to be held at Griffith Stadium June 10 for the benefit of the Shrine convention.

The Boxing Commission previously had announced it would set aside the customary "take" on the gate for the bout. The about-face decision was brought about by a legal interpretation of the Boxing Commission's own rules, which became official only after being approved by the District Commissioners.

The rule reads as follows:

"At each and every set of contests staged in the District of Columbia, where an admission fee is charged, directly or indirectly, the Commission shall collect a tax of 5 per centum (5%) of the gross amount of the gate receipts."

Although the Boxing Commission previously had voted to waive the 5 per cent cut on the gate for the Shrine show, over the protests of one member, Maj. Vandoren, chairman and a prominent attorney, pointed out at yesterday's meeting that such a procedure was, in his opinion, not permissible. A vote was taken and the Commission agreed to take the regular 5 per cent.

The bout is being promoted by Joe Turner, who will turn over a portion of the profits to the Shrine convention committee. It is estimated the contest will gross between $40,000 and $60,000, which will give the Commission a profit of between $2,000 and $3,000. The Commission waived its share of the gate receipts on the police benefit card last summer, which grossed in the neighborhood of $29,000.

W. & M. Track Team Downs Richmond

Little Snaps Two Records, Gets 23 Points in Last Home Effort.

By the Associated Press.

WILLIAMSBURG, Va., May 17.—With Moncure "Monk" Little leading his team to victory with a total of 23 points, William and Mary defeated the Richmond Spiders, 72-54, in the annual track meet between the two schools here today.

The Indian captain, who will enter the I. C. A. A. A. meet in Boston the latter part of this month, set a new State record in the century, a new college record in the 440, won the broad jump and furlong and placed second in the javelin. His participation in the meet far over-shadowed the other contestants, the Norfolk youth closing his college career on Cary Field with a brilliant finish.

Although he set a new State record of 9.6 seconds in the hundred, Little saw his record in the javelin broken by Woodrow Clark, who heaved the spear a distance of 211 feet 10 inches for a new State record. Little, running the 440-yard run for the first time in intercollegiate competition, broke the Old William and Mary record with a time of 49.8 to close his day's work. When he hung up his shoes, Monk Little held undisputed possession of five William and Mary records, namely: The hundred, furlong, 440, broad jump and javelin.

Va. Tech Bows Twice To William and Mary

Blacksburg, Va., May 17 (A.P.).—Playing heads up baseball and hitting opportunely, William and Mary's Indians took two games from Virginia Tech today by scores of 6 to 1 and 5 to 3. By agreement, both were seven-inning battles.

Tech out-hit the Indians in the first game and put more men on base, but failed in the pinches. Savedge hit a homer with Edmondson on in the second frame to put the visitors out in front.

Tech tossed the second game away by poor base-running after hitting Preacher Franklin hard in the fifth and driving him from the mound in the sixth. Daly, who hurled the first game, went back to the mound and held Tech to a lone tally in the last two innings.

Stumpy Thompson, Tech third sacker; made ten assists, one after the brilliant stop of Moore's sizzling grounder, and one put out in the first game and accepted three chances without an error in the second.

Stocks Recede As Inflation Flame Flickers

Profit Taking After Swift Advance Aids Downward Trend.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 17.—The flame of inflationary enthusiasm, which burned rather brightly on Thursday, flickered and petered out as shares turned irregularly downward in less active trading on the New York Stock Exchange today.

The damper on inflation spirits, brokers said, was the statement issued at the White House that President Roosevelt would veto the Patman fiat money bonus bill in the strongest terms at his command. While this doubtless prompted a good part of the selling, market analysts were at pains to point out that it was not the only factor.

A substantial amount of the liquidation, they said, represented profit taking by traders who wished to withdraw to the sidelines in order to let the market gets its breath after yesterday's sweeping advance.

Some caution was also inspired in market circles by the report of freight loadings for the week ended May 11. The total of 575,185 cars, 1.6 over the preceding week, showed a less than seasonal rise, according to Moody's index.

In terms of the Associated Press average of 60 stocks, the market closed .3 of a point lower at 42.2. Trading was considerably less active at 1,821,600 shares, compared with 2,419,010 shares yesterday.

Crops Prospect Lowers Grain

Wheat Yield Above Normal Is Indicated for This Year.

By the Associated Press.

Chicago, May 17.—Auspicious crop prospects, apparently pointing to a 1935 United States wheat yield above normal, did much today to send grain prices downhill.

Seeding of spring wheat in the American Northwest was reported as practically complete, and the outlook for the new crop the best in several years. Beneficial rains over domestic hard winter wheat territory southwest added to bearish sentiment, and for at least the time being there was a seeming complete eclipse of inflation as a grain market stimulus.

Wheat closed heavy at the day's bottom price level, 2⅛@2½ cents under yesterday's finish, July 91⅛@½, corn ⅞@1¼ down, July 81⅛@¾, oats ⅛@1¼ off, and provisions unchanged to 15 cents decline.

From the outset, favorable weather and crop reports, with lower quotations on silver, had a bearish effect. Lack of aggressive buying support was evident, a tendency to caution being manifest after yesterday's sharp advances.

Corn and oats were responsive to wheat action and to more favorable weather for corn planting. Arrival of a cargo of corn here from a Canadian port added to bearish sentiment. Provisions eased with grains, despite firmness of hog values.

Pig Iron Makings, 49,000,000 Tons

New York, May 17.—Nearly 49,000,000 gross tons of iron ore, coke, limestone, mill scale, cinder and scrap were charged into pig-iron producing blast furnaces last year, according to the Steel & Iron Institute. About 157,000,000 man hours of labor—equivalent to a full year's work for more than 100,000 men—were required last year to mine the iron ore, coal and limestone, to convert the coal into coke and finally to produce pig iron.

Manufacture of one ton of pig iron, it is estimated, requires about four tons of air, one and two-thirds tons of iron ore, almost one ton of coke, one-third of a ton of limestone, and about one-quarter of a ton of scrap, mill scale and cinder.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

New York, May 17.—Opposition to the unemployment insurance provisions of the pending social security bill from business enterprises will be materially lessened if Senator La Follette's amendment giving full exemption from the Federal excise tax to employers contributing to multiple-fund plans, like the Wisconsin law, is retained in the measure as finally passed. The Business Advisory Council of the Department of Commerce has strongly endorsed such a change, but many individual corporations that have followed a policy of keeping their staffs intact during the depression are especially emphatic in insisting upon the exemption privilege for the multiple-fund type of State unemployment insurance laws.

The Doughton bill as passed by the House virtually forces the States to establish single unemployment insurance funds to which all eligible employers will contribute. This is done indirectly by providing that employers must pay the Federal excise tax, which will be 3 per cent beginning with 1938, unless they contribute to an acceptable State fund. In the latter event, contributions to the State fund may be credited against the Federal impost up to 90 per cent of its amount. If an employer is relieved from further contributions to a State fund because of stabilization of employment in his plant, therefore, he would gain nothing under the Doughton bill because the excise tax payable to the Federal Government would automatically rise by the amount of his exemption from State payments.

Stabilization More Vital Than Insurance to Employes.

Employment stabilization, it is stressed by advocates of the separate fund principle, is very much more important to the employe than unemployment insurance. At best, employes losing their jobs would become entitled under a law like that now in effect in New York to a maximum of $15 per week in benefits for 16 weeks. Where a person loses his job and depression conditions make it extremely difficult to find new employment, the personal disaster would be little mitigated by such payments. In fact, the contention is advanced that people generally have been misled into believing that the social security bill will provide real protection for the person becoming unemployed instead of providing only very modest benefit payments for a relatively short period of unemployment.

The separate fund system is generally recognized as giving far more incentive to employment stabilization than the single fund. Thus, under the Wisconsin law, an employer who has contributed enough to build up a reserve of $75 per employe ceases from making additional contributions. If he can avoid discharging his employes, therefore, after having built up a reserve of this size for each, he would not have to pay any more into the fund. He will thus have complete exemption from further payments as a reward for employment stabilization.

Under a single fund plan, on the other hand, there is strong incentive to discharge unneeded employes more freely, since the employer will feel that they will be taken care of for some period at least through unemployment insurance benefits. In particular, resentment is expressed over the fact that concerns which stabilize employment, either as a policy or because of the nature of their business, will be contributing large sums regularly to pay benefits to employes of other industries which regularly reduce their staffs sharply whenever a business recession, seasonal or cyclical, develops.

Trend in Europe Away From Single Fund.

Advocates of the Wisconsin plan also point out that, while it is unique in many ways, the recent tendency in the field of unemployment insurance in Europe has been in the direction of multiple funds instead of single pools, such as the Doughton bill seeks to impose upon the States here.

The one-fund system is found in Great Britain, Germany, Italy and Austria, the pioneers in social insurance. However, in Germany and Austria unemployment insurance has now actually broken down into a mere system of taxing employers and employed workers for the benefit of the unemployed, the actuarial principle having been abandoned entirely. Great Britain in fact seems ready to depart from the single fund principle, since the proposed extension of unemployment insurance to agriculture in that country is to be effected by establishing a separate fund for the purpose.

On the other hand, France, Belgium, the Netherlands, Switzerland, Czechoslovakia and the Scandinavian countries have all adopted the multiple fund system in one guise or another. Sweden has latterly put into effect the latest system of unemployment insurance in Europe. Her plan reflects the conclusion that the single pool system has been discredited by actual experience in other countries.

Under the Wisconsin plan, the principle of employment stabilization is carried to the extreme of keeping individual accounts for each employer. In most European countries, on the other hand, this trend takes the form of maintaining separate funds for a number of homogeneous employer groups. Both plans escape the dangers of fostering rather than curbing employment fluctuations which the single fund or "grab bag" system, alone recognized as a basis for exemption from Federal tax in the Doughton bill, would do.

Export Copper 8.3 Cents Peak Price for a Year

New York, May 17 (AP).—The price of export copper continued to mount today, with sales ranging from 8.25 to 8.30 cents a pound. This was not only a new high for the current movement, but was the peak level for metal sold in the foreign market since May 16, 1934.

Firming copper prices were attributed partly to the growing demand as well as to curtailed production by foreign producers. Deliveries of copper abroad so far this year have run considerably ahead of the same 1934 period.

Vast Machinery Need Revealed by Survey

York, Pa., May 17.—W. S. Shipley, president of the York Ice Cream Machinery Corporation, said today that a survey just completed by the Machinery and Allied Products Institute, the executive committee of which he is a member, indicates that potential orders for $18,574,000,000 worth of machinery have accumulated since 1929. These eventual commitments are more than four times the tremendous total of the President's $4,000,000,000 Work Relief bill, he points out. Mr. Shipley interprets this as evidence that business recovery may now be penetrating to the durable goods industries, always among the last to feel the effects of general business improvement.

Eaton Lawsuit Reaches Basis Of Compromise

Chase Bank Is Excepted in Baltimore Circuit Court Ruling.

By the Associated Press.

Baltimore, May 17.—A partial compromise of claims in connection with the Continental shares, incorporated, receivership was disclosed here today. The compromise was approved by Ohio courts on April 20 and subsequently by Judge J. Frank Supplee, jr., in Baltimore Circuit Court.

If specifically excepted matters concerned in the litigation now pending in New York against the Chase National Bank in connection with bills and loans in which Cyrus S. Eaton, Cleveland financier, who was one of the organizers of continental shares, was concerned.

The New York suit against the bank was authorized by the Baltimore court last October, being brought by William D. MacMillan as Maryland receiver for the Investment Trust.

Documents filed in the Baltimore court disclosed that the court of Cuyahoga County, Ohio, had approved of settlements with interests represented by George B. Young by the delivery to him of 16,500 shares of Firestone Tire & Rubber Co. stock upon delivery to the receiver of releases and 3,000 shares of Cliffs Corporate stock; that delivery of $125,000 in cash to another group of eight claimants was authorized upon delivery of releases from the contract to purchase certain securities.

The Ohio receiver was authorized in Ohio to exchange releases with Eaton, excluding any claims against him in connection with the bank suit, and directing that Eaton surrender to the receiver 32,213 shares of the Republic Steel Co. and that the receiver cancel his note for more than $2,000,000 to the investment trust upon which the stock had been placed as collateral.

Textiles Decline Less During April

New York, May 17.—"The downward trend in textile prices, as reflected in Textile World's index numbers, was less in evidence during April than in previous months," Textile World will report in its May issue.

"Raw cotton is holding its own," the report continues, "and raw wool declined only 3 points, as against a loss of 8 points for each of the preceding months."

Bond Traders Cash Profits Of Brisk Rise

Government Issues Show Declining Tendency; Volume Lighter.

By the Associated Press.

New York, May 17.—The bond market drifted aimlessly about today when enthusiasm for low-priced issues cooled and traders sought to cash in paper profits made in Thursday's upturn. U. S. Governments were uniformly lower.

The contraction in volume to $11,943,000, par value, against $16,720,000 the day before was due almost entirely to the lack of interest in secondary issues. The Associated Press averages were .1 of a point higher to .3 of a point lower.

The strong language employed by White House spokesmen in reiterating the determination of President Roosevelt to veto the Patman bonus bill left the inflationary crowd somewhat confused and while selling was orderly, it was persistent among rails and utilities and these groups gave the most ground. Industrials mustered enough strength to withstand the attack and a number ended fractionally higher.

Declines in the Government section averaged around 4/32ds among the Treasury loans, but was less severe in indirect obligations. Renewed talk of June 15 financing plans was believed in investment circles to have created a feeling of caution among traders and institutions who devote most of their activity to this section of the listed market.

'C' Club Meet Today Draws 230 Entries

Tech Against the Field Is Outlook; New Marks Are Held Likely.

AN ARMY of Virginians comes into Washington today gunning for Tech High in the seventeenth annual Central "C" Club track and field meet in Central Stadium. At 1 o'clock, Coach Hap Hardell's defending forces of 30 runners and weight men will open a three-hour fight over the cinder path and in the pit for their second straight "C" Club title.

Despite an entry list of 19 men by Eastern and 16 by Roosevelt, no Washington schools are figured to put much pressure on Tech, and it is to Newport News High, John Marshall of Richmond, Staunton Military Academy and Episcopal High of Alexandria that the eyes of those fearing or expecting that Tech might be toppled will be turned.

Coach Hardell has expressed no little apprehension over the power of Newport News in recently sweeping to the Virginia State High School title and Staunton in winning the State prep school championship.

Of the 230 athletes to compete, only a handful are conceded a chance of breaking any records and Ed Miller, lanky Eastern High jumper, is one of the more prominent of that number. The "C" Club high jump record of 6 feet 1⅝ inches, set in 1933 by Harmon, of Woodberry Forest, was bettered by Miller last week in the Tome Institute meet at Fort Deposit when the converted Eastern basket ball player soared to a new mark for the Tome meet of 6 feet 2 inches.

Hopkins May Set Mark.

Bill Hopkins, the John Marshall sprinter, who copped a double victory in the 100 and 220 last year, is another possible record-breaker. While the century mark of 9.7 held by Frank Hussey, of New York, is safe, the furlong record of 22.2 set by Hopkins last year faces substantial peril in Hopkins' twinkling pinions.

Thee 100 should prove a brilliant spectacle with 31 sprinters entered, five of them having done 10 flat previously this year. George Bogan, of Tech, is the sole Washington hope, while Baetjer, of Gilman School, Baltimore, and Watson, of Staunton figure to be Hopkins' chief worries.

Flick Hoxton, of Episcopal, an Alexandria-born boy, carries the colors of the Capital section into the 440 and the 880 in which he is something of a favorite, though Carter and Dodd, of Newport News, have been clocked in 51 seconds for the quarter.

Tech's half-mile and mile relay teams throw the records for those events into danger, while John Marshall and Newport News reign prominently in the sprint medley relay predictions.

Alexandria Beaten At Fredericksburg

Defeated, 5-3; Loses Claim to State B Title.

Special Dispatch to The Post.

FREDERICKSBURG, Va., May 17.—Fredericksburg High School defeated Alexandria High, 5 to 3, today. The defeat was the first of the season in the State for the Alexandrians, who by a victory today would have clinched the claim to the Northern Virginia Class B High School title.

Stark Jones, a youthful Jacket pitcher who has not suffered a loss this year, worked the entire game against the visitors, holding them to seven hits, one of which was a homer in the seventh by Lee Fones with two men on.

Butch Wood, young Alexandria ace, allowed the Jackets seven hits.

By the Associated Press.

King Saxon Is 2-1 Belmont Choice

held at 3 to 1. The race figures to be strictly a two-horse affair.

The $5,000 Granite State Handicap, a test of 1 1-16 miles at Rockingham Park, has attracted 11 older horses, including Alfred G. Vanderbilt's Identify, winner of the Toboggan Handicap. Like King Saxon, he too should benefit by the weights, as he has been assigned 108, two less than he carried at Belmont Park. He will have a capable running mate in Dogmata, runner-up to Robert Robertson's Lynx Eye in the Speed Handicap at the opening of the New Hampshire oval.

Lynx Eye also has been named and will carry 111, eight less than Walter O'Hara's Howard, top weight of the field, and five less than W. C. Weant's Prince Fox, which boasted of a long string of victories until he finished out of the money in the opening-day feature.

Eight 3-year-old fillies will take the track for the renewal of the $2,500 Kentucky Oaks, the feature of the final day of racing at Churchill Downs. Paradisical rules the pre-race choice to whip Mid Victorian and Tabitha from the Warm and Hackett stables, Hope Eternal, Spanish Babe, Scarp, Star Banner and Lady Flinders.

Navy Is Choice In Boat Race At Ithaca

Cool, Fair Day Forecast; Middies in Event for First Time.

By the Associated Press.

ITHACA, N. Y., May 17.—Four of the east's crack crews representing Navy, Princeton, Cornell and Yale held final light workouts today for the Carnegie cup Regatta on Cuyhuga Lake tomorrow.

Because of rough weather on the lake, the visiting crews drilled this morning on the inlet.

Light north to northwest winds, quartering across the unprotected two-mile east shore course, were forecast to continue tomorrow. The day will be cool and fair. Cornell oarsmen, handicapped by rough waters the past three days, hoped the lake would be smooth by race time, 5:30 p. m., eastern standard time.

40 Minute Intervals.

The plan is to send the freshmen eights away first with the junior varsity and varsity races following at 40-minute intervals. Navy will be represented only in the varsity event and is favored to win.

No last-minute changes in the boatings were made by Coaches Wray, of Cornell; Walsh, of Navy; Leader, of Yale, or Sykes, of Princeton.

The Princeton and Navy eights are unchanged, but the Cornell and Yale boatings have been shifted since their recent defeats by Syracuse and Pennsylvania.

First Time in Event.

The Tars from Annapolis will be competing in the Carnegie Cup regatta for the first time. Already this season they have defeated Columbia and Cornell and they look forward to a win tomorrow in the hope of consolidating their position for the Eastern sprint title. In the event of a Navy win, the title is expected to be settled at the Penn-Harvard-Navy race at Annapolis, May 25.

Cornell drew the inshore lane for the varsity race, with Princeton in No. 2, Yale, No. 3, and Navy, No. 4. For the junior varsity, Princeton drew No. 1, with Yale and Cornell on the outside in that order.

W. & L. Beats Navy In Weird Tilt, 10-8

Four Runs in Seven, Three in Eighth Give Margin.

By the Associated Press.

LEXINGTON, Va., May 17.—Scoring four runs in the seventh and three in the eighth, Washington and Lee's Conference champions today defeated Navy, 10 to 8, in one of the weirdest ball games seen on Wilson field in some time.

The Midshipmen pounced on the offerings of Joe Pette in the first and collected five runs with as many hits. However, the Generals' hurler settled down and contributed heavily to his own victroy by getting four hits, including a circuit drive, out of five trips, and crossing the plate for three runs.

The score stood 6 to 3 when the Generals went to bat in the seventh, and Iler and Howerton started a rally with successive bingles. Short drew a walk and four Generals scored on hits by Pette and Dickman. Spain scored on Pette's wild pitch in the eighth to tie the score, but the Generals came back with three runs in the same frame for the margin of victory.

THE BUNGLE FAMILY Oh, Hello! By Harry J. Tuthill

Those Bungles! Ah, I remember that outfit! And this fellow... leaving my sister, his wife, and a lovely daughter for weeks with a rogue like Sierro.
As I say, chief, I know the colonel and I feel sure...
Josephine, how did it happen...? you who were always so level-headed, marrying one of those small-fry Bungles?
Oh, George has done all right. I'll admit I haven't seen him for weeks, but we lost track of you for years, Ches.
Hum hum, I see the years haven't cooled your temper much, Josephine.
Well Ches. I hate to have anyone try to walk on me and....
What's that?
Someone calling.
It's.. By jove, the colonel!
Yes, it's Dad at last!
Oh-h George!

On the Air Today

By Katherine Smith.

It's practically "kiddies" day on the air, with juveniles crowding three stations with various stunts. First of all comes The Post's Spelling Bee on WJSV at 10:30 a. m. and again at 2 p. m. Contestants are winners of county matches in Maryland and Virginia, who aspire to the national bee broadcast from WJSV, May 28.

Both WJSV and WRC will broadcast the schoolboy patrol parade, WJSV at 11 a. m., WRC at 10:45 a. m. The parade, 6,000 strong, will be described by two youngsters—Banks Murray on WJSV, and Floyd Jennings on WRC.

At the Children's Frolic, WMAL, 10:45 a. m., three winning school glee clubs of the Fairfax County contest will be head. The schools are Falls Church, Baileys and Forestville, with about 25 youthful singers from each.

The National Capitol Cadet Band, as a result of playing in the American Legion parade, was judged the best children's band and will be awarded a silver trophy on WRC, 10 a. m. Commander James O'Connor Roberts will make the award to Charles Williams, leader of the band.

A mammoth benefit show and ball will be staged at Madison Square Garden tonight to aid the N. V. A. fund and Masonic clubs' combined charities. A program of stage acts, musical comedy ensembles, sports contests and dance bands has been arranged by the actors' committee, headed by Eddie Cantor. This is heard on WOL, 8:45 p. m. until midnight, originating from WMCA, New York.

Dial twists:

Walter Johnson guesting with Thornton Fisher, WRC, 6:45 p. m.

"Man in the Street" tells you what he thinks about chain letters, WJSV, 5:30 p. m.

Amelia Earhart guesting with Al Jolson, WRC, 8:30 p. m.

Cincinnati Conservatory in another classic concert, WJSV, 10 a. m.

A group of educators speaking on the Good Will Day program, WRC, 2 p. m.

Dresden Boys Choir heard from Germany, WRC, 11:30 a. m.

The Federal Diary

Trade-Mark Registered U. S. Patent Office.

By Morgan Baker.

FEDERAL employes are working an "appalling amount of overtime, and only 47½ per cent are permitted to have Sunday free from some labor," according to Luther C. Steward, president of the National Federation of Federal Employes, who completed tabulations on more than 3,000 questionnaires on overtime last night.

BAKER.

Replies were received from the District and 43 States, as well as the Territories, N. F. F. E. officials said.

It was shown in the survey that 62 per cent enjoy the benefit of the Saturday half-holiday.

Daily hours of work, the employe leader pointed out, range from 5 hours for charwomen to 24 for lighthouse keepers, prison guards, Indian School matrons and workers on sea-going dredges. Average working hours per day were found to be 8.2, and of the 3,000 replies only 221 Government workers have a seven-hour day or approximately 7 per cent of the total number answering the questionnaire.

Many who report an eight-hour day stated that they are on call 24 hours and the N. F. F. E. feels that it is probable the average of 8.2 hours is low. Nurses, hospital attendants and other employes of Veterans' Administration facilities have especially long hours.

Among those answering the questionnaires were persons occupying such widely diversified positions as charwoman, seamstress, physician, dredger, accountant, nurse, civil service examiner, laborer, game management agent, forest ranger, clerk, cook adviser to schoolboys, internal revenue agent, etc.

"The definite, specific facts and figures which the National Federation of Federal Employes now holds as a result of its survey reveal the emphatic need for immediate remedial action," Mr. Steward asserted.

The questionnaires tell a moving, human story of overwork and loyal self-sacrifice on the part of thousands of employes of the Federal Government. They likewise tell a story of unsound and unfortunate personnel policy on the part of the Federal Government. These facts and figures show that the Federal Government is indulging in indefensible sweatshop tactics, and that it is inflicting upon its own employes conditions which Administration leaders have decried in private enterprise.

"As a result of its survey, the National Federation of Federal Employes has tangible, factual evidence of shameful conditions which demand immediate rectification. The facts as we have ascertained them from first-hand information are the strongest possible support for the national federation's effort to bring about improvement in the present deplorable leave and hours situation."

TAXPAYERS are losing $100,000,000 a year as the direct result of the patronage system in Federal, State and local governments, Dr. Leonard D. White, Civil Service Commissioner, told the Hammond (Ind.) League of Women Voters last night.

Realization of this waste, Dr. White declared, is one of the reasons for the new drive in favor of the merit system and the elimination of politics from the business operations of government.

"The difference between the patronage and merit systems is fundamental," he said. "They are irreconcilably opposed. The interest of good government demands the expansion of the merit system and the gradual elimination of the patronage system. Many officials would be glad to get rid of patronage. The patronage brokers are not so much to be blamed for the system which they operate, since the system grew up over a period of many years. It is the system which has to be eliminated."

In the list of Government participants on the program of the thirtieth annual meeting of the American Association of Museums which appeared here this week, the name of Dr. John Collier, Commissioner of Indian Affairs, should have been included. He will give a talk on the opening day of the convention, May 23, on "The Outlook for Indian Arts and Crafts."

Speakers Are Announced.

At the meeting of the Biological Society of Washington, to be held tonight at the Cosmos Club, the following speakers are listed:

Dr. Alan Stone (P), associate entomologist, Bureau of Entomology and Plant Quarantine, will give an illustrated account of "The Diptera of the District of Columbia and Vicinity," including the biology and economic aspects of the more important flies of this region.

Dr. George S. Myers (C), assistant curator of the Division of Fishes, National Museum, will explain the what and how of aquarium fish culture in an illustrated talk on "Tropical Fresh Water Aquarium Fishes." This paper will be supplemented by an exhibition of specimens illustrating the breeding of small tropical fishes in aquaria, under the direction of Robert B. Wallace and Richard Higgins.

Special Meeting Called.

J. 1. Bellow, Procurement Division, Treasury, commander of Treasury Post, No. 35, American Legion, announces a special meeting of the post to be held at Duffy's Sea Grill at 1:30 p. m. today to map plans for an entertainment June 15.
